Harold Jackson hall is first building in College master plan

Concluding months of planning and discussion, Joseph W. Tkach, chairman of the Board of Regents, approved a long-range master plan for Ambassador College. Approval took place after a final meeting of Church and College officials March 20.

"Even before we consolidated all college activities on the Big Sandy campus, it was evident that we needed to develop a long-range plan for the College," Mr. Tkach said in an April 23 interview with The Worldwide News.

"Much of the construction that took place in the 1960s and the 1970s was of a temporary nature. The buildings, including trailers used for classrooms, were not expected to be used for as long as they have."

'Long-term needs'

"Over the past two years we have worked on redeveloping the facility to serve the College and Church's needs for many years to come," Mr. Tkach continued. "Now we can turn our attention to resolving more of the College's long-term needs."

As part of this effort, the board chairman directed that a master plan be developed to accommodate growth and expansion of Ambassador College over the next decade, and perhaps beyond.

The first phase in implementing the master plan will be a new 25,300-square-foot building that will be named the Harold L. Jackson Hall of Humanities in honor of the late evangelist.

Dear Brethren,

As we observe the annual festivals and Holy Days, it is important to understand that we are not merely keeping the Old Testament observances minus the sacrifices.

The coming of the Son of God transformed these festivals into completely new ones. The Old Testament observances were shadows of the true reality revealed in Jesus Christ (Colossians 2:16-17).

Our observance of the festivals must certainly not omit the great supernatural events of God's deliverance of his people Israel in the Old Testament, but we must realize that those miracles served to foreshadow the incomparably greater miracles of salvation through Jesus Christ.

We should not become so caught up in the rituals of the Old Testament observance of these Holy Days that we lose sight of their transcendent fulfillment in Jesus Christ as revealed in the New Testament.

For Christians, the festivals are no longer Old Testament Holy Days. They have been transformed in meaning to teach us about the gospel—God's past, present and future work in Jesus Christ for the salvation of the whole world.

We are not celebrating, as Israel did, just the deliverance of one nation (which was merely the physical forerunner, or type, of what God would do in Jesus Christ for all peoples). When we keep the Holy Days, we are commemorating and celebrating God's glorious plan of salvation for all humanity.

At Passover, we honor Jesus Christ as our Redeemer, and we commemorate God's love in sending his Son to die for our sins and the sins of the whole world (John 3:16, I John 2:2).

During the Festival of Unleavened Bread, we celebrate the reality of our new birth, our new life in Jesus Christ, united with him in his resurrection (Romans 6:4, Colossians 2:12, 3:1).

On Pentecost, we commemorate God's gift of the Holy Spirit as our Comforter and Advocate (John 15:26). On Trumpets, we honor Christ as the Judge of all (John 5:22, II Corinthians 5:10, Isaiah 2:4, Revelation 11:18) and as Ruler of all the world (Revelation 11:15).

On Atonement, we honor Christ as the slain and resurrected Lamb of God (Revelation 5:6-10) through whom God has made atonement for us (Romans 5:10-11), and we celebrate Jesus' binding of the power of Satan (Romans 16:20, Hebrews 2:14, Revelation 20:2).

During the Feast of Tabernacles and the Last Great Day, we celebrate Jesus' millennial reign with the saints after his second coming (Revelation 20:4-6), the preaching of the gospel to those who have never heard it (verses 11-12) and the glorious arrival of the new heavens and new earth (Revelation 21:1-4).

Members feel effects of Los Angeles riots

AT PRESS TIME, violence, rioting, arson and looting continued to plague Los Angeles. Three Church families with houses close to the fires were evacuated from the south-central area, which was hardest hit, and housed on Church property in Pasadena Thursday afternoon, April 30.

"I have not heard of any injuries or stolen property from our members who live there or nearby," Curtis May, pastor of the Los Angeles congregation, said May 1.

One member said there were shootings a couple blocks from where she lives. "She and her husband spent the night with relatives in Orange County," reported Judd Kirk, Long Beach pastor. Services were canceled in Long Beach and Reseda, Calif., May 2.

In Pasadena one in a group of 12 to 14 youths punched Stephen Gilbreath, a member who attends the West P.M. congregation, April 29 as he left an optometrist's office on Colorado Boulevard across from the Plaza Pasadena (now closed indefinitely). Mr. Gilbreath suffered facial injuries but was not taken to the hospital.

"I'm sure God gave me some protection, because I was surprised that the whole group didn't jump on me and keep going," said Mr. Gilbreath. "The one guy who hit me—the anger and hate I saw in his eyes was vicious."

Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach advised all employees to take safety precautions: "Because of the recent violence in the Los Angeles area, all employees should evaluate the safety of themselves and take appropriate precautions."

Pasadena police arrested 50 suspected looters between 7 and 11 p.m., April 30. A dusk-to-dawn curfew went into effect in some of the affected areas.

Church plans media program for Russia

Several booklets to be translated into Russian

By Paul Monteith

"The Church is planning for a Russian-language Work," said evangelist Bernard Schnippert, director of Media Operations.

John Karlson, German-language regional director, who oversees the Russian project in St. Petersburg, "is arranging for translators to have several of our booklets translated into the Russian language with guidance from headquarters," said Mr. Schnippert.

Some of the funds for the translation program have come from member donations.

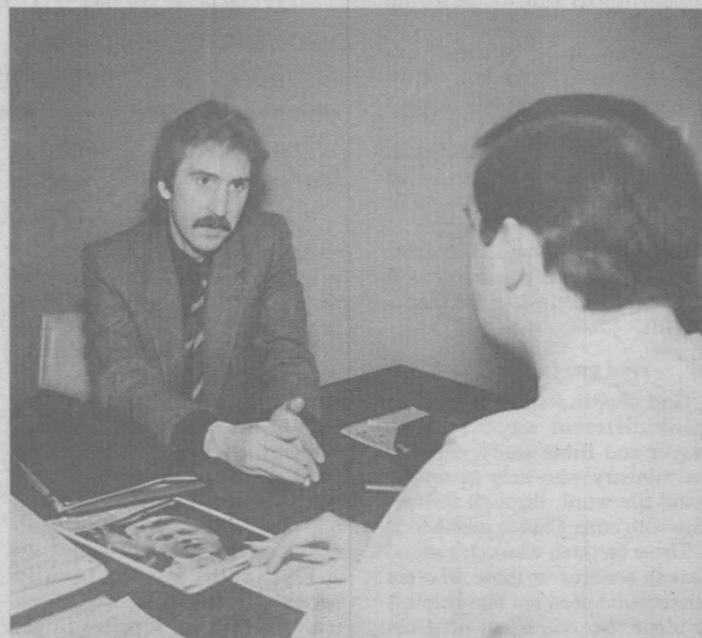

The connection between the former Soviet Union and the Church continues to grow.

Sergei Yerioman, director of foreign relations of the first independent private television company in the Ukraine, visited Church headquarters March 29 and 30.

Mr. Yerioman, a Plain Truth subscriber, spoke with Victor Kubik, assistant director of Church Administration U.S., about the Church, its publications and telecast.

He is familiar with the St. Petersburg project and plans to meet with Cliff Worthing, a staff member at Petersburg Television-Radio.

While here Mr. Yerioman toured the Television studio and Editorial Services.

Nationalism curse threatens unity cause

Only eight months away from its most significant achievement to date—the creation of the single market Dec. 31—the cause of European unity is under great strain.

It is finally sinking in on the citizens in many of the 12 European Community (EC) countries that the further advances toward unity agreed to by leaders of the 12 at the EC summit in Maastricht, Netherlands, last December, are going to mean much greater sacrifices of national sovereignty to a European super-state.

The Maastricht pact seeks to establish common foreign and defense policies and, most importantly, a single European currency and central bank by 1999 at the latest.

There are growing doubts the Maastricht accord may not go into effect, since all 12 nations must approve it. A June 2 referendum in Denmark on the treaty may be the political weather vane (opinion polls indicate a possible rejection).

Jitters in Germany, Austria

At the same time, surging forces of nationalism present an equally challenging threat to the cause of European unity.

Capitalizing on rising public fears over soaring numbers of immigrants and the future loss of the mighty German mark to a single European currency, German voters catapulted right-wing extremist parties into parliamentary representation in two states April 5.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl conceded his Christian Democratic Party suffered a terrible defeat when it lost sole control of Baden-Wuerttemberg for the first time in 20 years.

Despite this, the greater concern is for Germany's neighbor to the east, Austria, which is expected to be an EC member soon.

The rightist Freedom Party of Austria captured 25 percent of the vote in municipal elections in Linz and Vienna, surging past the Conservatives to become the second largest party in the capital.

Formerly a refuge for aging Austrian Nazis, the Freedom Party has been rejuvenated in the past five years by its young, dashing leader, Joerg Haider.

Called by some a "yuppie-fascist," Mr. Haider, 42, has openly but carefully praised some policies of the Third Reich, although he usually claims his remarks are twisted by political opponents.

Because Austria has not fully acknowledged its World War II Nazi past, extremists find more fertile soil there than in Germany.

Gallup polls have unearthed disturbingly high levels of anti-Semitism and distrust of foreigners.

Mr. Haider is banking on public disgust over political scandals to propel him into the federal chancellorship someday.

The fractured forces of the right in Germany are not nearly as formidable. They are also under much closer governmental surveillance than those in Austria.

Nevertheless, the extremist fringe in Germany is growing. The ever-wary German news media has been highlighting 25-year-old Fuehrer claimant, Ewald Althans, who is determined to pull all right-wing forces under his command.

Mr. Althans represents, says one German sociologist, "the first of a new generation of Nazi ideologists who survive without the 'old men.'" At the same time, Mr. Althans did not absorb all his ideas just from history books.

In his teens, as an admitted political rebel, Althans was introduced to some old Nazis.

One of these men, who served under Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's wartime propaganda minister, 88-year-old Willi Kraemer, "taught me rhetoric and philosophy. He inspired me," says Mr. Althans.

He admits to being an anti-Semite, professing that "the Holo-

States, I took every opportunity to fill up the fuel tank because gas stations are far apart.

Similarly, we should take every opportunity to replenish our lives, going to God daily so that the "inward man is being renewed day by day" (II Corinthians 4:16).

He is ready to provide for us daily—with the same power and concern that he always shows.

We can depend on him to meet all our "need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

Throughout the Psalms God is called the deliverer. He hasn't changed. He delivers his saints today.

If we need courage to live in these upside down times, God provides it. If we need love, he gives it. If we need help to overcome our doubts, he offers it. If we need forgiveness for our sins, he forgives and forgets.

Go to God and present your at work" within him (New English Bible).

Experience not enough

As we mature in our Christian growth it often seems that our needs increase rather than decrease.

Christians should not expect to get by on experience alone. We need constant daily provision, such as the confidence to endure and the humility to listen. We may need additional energy to renew our flagging spirits, or the patience to keep on living in an extremely difficult situation.

This help we need daily because we cannot depend on yesterday's spiritual supplies to get us through, nor does God want us to.

caust is a fabrication." He also says, chillingly: "Hitler is a hero to me.... I am living proof Hitler can happen again."

Save Germany, rescue European unity

Germany's neighbors are understandably anxious over support being given to the far right.

Europe's responsible leaders realize it is bad enough for extreme nationalism to erupt in the Balkans or in the Caucasus.

But it is far more serious to let xenophobic nationalism reestablish itself in Germany, the single most important country in the European Community.

A narrow-minded nationalistic Germany ("nationalism will be our binding agent, a greater Germany will be our aim," says Mr. Althans) would wreck everything Europe has achieved since the end of World War II.

The slow, painful march toward European unity would have been all in vain.

What policies may ensure that the cause of unity is not lost? Watch these areas.

First, one likely outcome of the German situation could be redoubled efforts by other European nations to help Germany diffuse its latent nationalism.

A sign from Jerusalem

A sign in Israel makes this request: "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem."

The following article is by Gerhard O. Marx, a local church elder in Dunstable, England.

During a trip through the Holy Land, my wife, Diana, and I found peace continually emphasized throughout our stay.

The official Jordanian and Israeli guides spoke of it. Ecclesiastical voices raised it. The Jerusalem Post referred to it. The word was spotlighted at Eilat airport in large Hebrew letters.

This elusive concept has haunted these lands for millennia. The writers of Psalms requested readers to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem" (Psalm 122:6).

The prophet Isaiah foretold that a Prince of Peace would come to bring peace to this city (Isaiah 9:6). But 2,600 years later, peace has not been achieved in Jerusalem. There it remains only a dream.

Long travail

Peace in the Holy Land is on everybody's lips but has not been imbedded in many hearts.

Jerusalem has been besieged on 20 different occasions, twice devastated and has experienced 11 religious transitions.

In its 3,000-year history, the city has been ruled by the Jebusites, the Judeans, the Babylonians, the Romans, the Christians, the Muslims, the Turks, the British, the Israelis, and influenced by the Greeks and Persians.

Jerusalem means "city of peace" but has seldom enjoyed periods of prolonged peace.

To be at peace, the Arabs insist

The other EC states might feel compelled to calm German fears over the impending loss of the deutsche mark. One way might be to base the future European central bank in Frankfurt.

They may also reconsider the proposed name for the currency, ecu (European Currency Unit). Germans dislike the word since it is too close to their word for cow (kuh). One wonders if Euromark could be the final result.

Also, look for EC leaders to call for urgent financial assistance for the struggling ex-communist countries of Eastern Europe, to stem the refugee tide and disarm extremists of one of their main issues.

Finally, watch to see who becomes president of the EC Commission when Jacques Delors retires in 1994. The speculation is that German Chancellor Kohl is interested in the job.

Mr. Delors says a bigger Community needs a "European executive" with greater power. His advisers suggest Mr. Kohl fits the bill.

Having Chancellor Kohl as the EC's executive would calm Germany's angst over European unity.

Reported the April 18 Economist: "Mr. Kohl has often repeated that 'German and European unity are two sides of the same coin.' Having achieved the first, he may apply himself to the second."

the Israelis give up land gained during the 1967 conflict. But Jews consider this to be no less than the sale of their birthright, and they say the land is essential for security.

"We have returned to our most sacred sites never to leave them again!" said the late Moshe Dayan, Israeli defense minister, after conquering the Old City of Jerusalem in 1967.

When a Jerusalem Post journalist asked Israel's prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir, what his Likud party's reelection prospects were, he said: "We will certainly put at the top of our platform our serious desire and movement towards meeting peace."

When asked if he hoped to achieve peace "without giving up land," Mr. Shamir replied: "That's right. We are ... keeping the Land of Israel along with an unrelenting effort towards peace."

The Arab states have been uncompromising in their stand not to recognize Israel's existence. Some Arab countries have called for a jihad—a holy war against Israel—but such talk is unlikely to lead Israel to give up territory.

Entrenched views on both sides make a lasting human peace a nonstarter. Consequently the Holy Land exists in a high state of military tension.

The Messiah's sign

To bring peace to the holy city is an awesome assignment only the long-awaited Messiah can accomplish.

Jerusalem will become a city of peace when the Prince of Peace returns to this earth.

Meanwhile, Arab and Jewish inhabitants utter their words for peace when greeting one another—"Shalom" and "Salaam"—but their peace remains a dream.

Don't run on empty

I have vivid memories of my father routinely driving our family car with the gas tank gauge pointing to EMPTY.

"You are running on empty again," my mother would say. "I know, I know," he'd reply, "but when the needle gets to that point on the gauge there is always a gallon or two left in the tank."

I don't know if my father was simply out of money, or if he liked to push his luck.

But I do remember many worrisome trips on lonely roads in northwestern states with our car appearing to run on gasoline fumes.

What about our spiritual gas tank? Do we try to see how far we can go without spiritually topping up?

Brethren, we need a constant supply of spiritual fuel and God will provide it. But do we go to him often enough for a fill-up?

If we forget or neglect to go to the source of our power, we will find it difficult to live the Christian life.

God meets our need

God supplies spiritual fuel in many different ways: through prayer and Bible study, through the ministry who help us understand his word, through fellowship with other Church members.

Those brethren who can't attend Church services or those who are housebound need not feel helpless or alone. No one is cut off from the source of spiritual strength.

For all of us, wherever we live, through Bible study, prayer, fasting, meditation and reading

Mr. Tkach announces changes for French-language region

To increase efficiency and prepare the French-speaking nations of Europe for future growth, Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach announced that all media and office functions of the French-speaking region will be consolidated under evangelist Cam Catherwood, now French and Italian regional director.

"It has become clear to me that the Work in French-speaking areas needs further restructuring of its various operations in order to avoid duplication of activities and the kind of overlapping that occurs when related functions are scattered in several areas," Mr. Tkach said in a memo to French-speaking ministers in Europe.

French-language mail received from Europe will be handled in Big Sandy, using primarily student employees from French-speaking countries in Europe. This should shorten turnaround time for literature requests.

As head of French media, Mr. Catherwood will report to evangelist Bernard Schnippert, Media Operations director worldwide. As supervisor of the French-speaking list Bernard Schnippert, Media Operations director worldwide. As supervisor of the French-speaking churches, Mr. Catherwood will report to evangelist Larry Salyer, director of Church Administration International.

"Mr. Catherwood was educated in French-speaking Canada, and French was one of the languages spoken during his childhood," said Mr. Schnippert.

Mr. Catherwood has also pastored the Brussels, Belgium, and Paris congregations.

He remains regional director for Italian-speaking areas and Malta. Because of the relatively small size of the Italian-speaking region, he is able to assume the additional load of his new responsibilities.

Mr. Tkach partially restructured the French-language region two years ago, when evangelist Dibar Apartian became full-time editor of La Pure Verite (French Plain Truth) and other Church publications, and Olivier Carion moved from Europe to manage the French Office and supervise French mail processing in Pasadena.

Some office functions continued in the Geneva, Switzerland, and Paris suboffices.

"It is our plan for the immediate future to retain our suboffices in Paris and Geneva, though a number of functions will be transferred to Big Sandy in the coming weeks," Mr. Tkach said.

Mr. Apartian will continue as editor of all French-language publications, including La Pure Verite, booklets, brochures and the correspondence course. He and his staff will remain in Pasadena, where they will combine with the Editorial Services Department.

Mr. Carion will return to Europe to pastor congregations there.

Mr. Catherwood "is very concerned, as we all are, that the Work in France and other French-speaking nations continues to develop and grow, as God gives the increase," Mr. Tkach said.

"I ask you to join with me in praying that God will bless and guide these endeavors, as we move ahead with plans for consolidation," he added.

Australian Office will serve New Zealand, Pacific area

Evangelist Raymond McNair returns to the United States in June after serving as regional director in New Zealand and the South Pacific for almost 4 1/2 years.

While no regional director will be assigned to live in New Zealand, Rod Matthews, regional director in Australia and Asia, will be responsible for the area and office there.

Mr. Matthews will continue to live in Australia and make periodic visits.

The New Zealand Office will function as before, servicing the needs of the brethren, Plain Truth subscribers, mailing, donation processing and other media activities.

William Hutchison, a local elder who has served as business manager of the Auckland Office since 1968, was named office manager.

Mr. McNair and his wife, Eve, are moving to Florida, where he will pastor the Boca Raton and West Palm Beach congregations.

"My wife and I have fond memories of our time in New Zealand," Mr. McNair said.

"We have grown to love God's people here, who have gone through hard economic times since the 1987 crash, and we will remember them in our prayers.

"We will not soon forget the natural beauty" of these countries either, Mr. McNair continued. "I have often thought of them and referred to them as paradise."

Mrs. McNair said they "have mixed emotions leaving New Zealand, although a new challenge is always welcome," and they look forward to spending time with their children and grandchildren.

I am a 26-year-old single Christian woman and painfully lonely, but your article "Looking for Love" in the February Plain Truth gave me hope and encouragement.

Being single hurts. Deep down there is a strong emotional longing to be with another human being and share an intimate relationship with that special person.

I find your magazine most encouraging and informative. I especially find your views on Christianity and daily living exact and to the point. Also, the fact that you send your magazine without charge is truly a credit to yourselves.

Actor notes singles' conduct

After performing for the seniors of the Toronto church, 30 Outreach members went to a restaurant to dance. The group filled an upper level section of the restaurant.

Later that evening a gentleman approached one of the young ladies and asked if the group belonged to the Worldwide Church of God.

He said he had received The Plain Truth before and thought it was a remarkable magazine. He also said he was impressed to see a group of young people enjoying life and dancing in a good, clean manner.

Children with disabilities

I am an adult who has had cerebral palsy since birth.

For nearly 14 years I have been out on my own taking care of myself. I want to give encouragement to those families that one day, with the right training, their disabled children can be independent as much as the disability will enable them.

There is no way that I can put into words what it is like living with this disability for nearly 40 years.

I was treated by my mother as a child with certain limitations, but that I could push those limitations a little further than what I might believe. My mom taught me that we all have limitations. She tried to instill in me, that even if I thought that I accomplished a task, that I could possibly show improvement.

She also told me that others can see my limitations, but I cannot see theirs.

I grew up with three brothers, one who is older and two who are younger. The younger ones did not see me with a disability. They saw me as a big sister who happened to be a pain more often than they could count.

I believe it is important that the disabled child learn to laugh at his or her disability. Yes, I do laugh at and joke about my disability. It is something that just happened and I cannot change it even if I wanted to. I am going to enjoy my life in spite of my disability.

If one wants to accomplish something bad enough that person will find a way. This is important when your disabled child thinks he or she cannot do something because of the disability.

My mom would show me how to fold towels. She would tell me that she did not have my handicap, and that I would have to find the best way for me to do it. She wanted me to use my imagination to accomplish folding towels to reach the same result.

There are setbacks because so much time, effort and energy are put into what needs to be done from day to day.

The body and mind are saying, "I cannot take it any more, so I am going to shut down for a while." If it goes on too long then the child will have to relearn what has already been learned.

I believe there is nothing wrong with taking short periods of rest. That is why workers take vacations.

However, one cannot take a vacation from a disability. Having a disability is more of a mental struggle than a physical struggle. To find a balance between them is difficult, but it can be done.

Reinforce to your children that we all work at different speeds. As I started to show more and more improvement my mom gave me more to do around the house, just like one would do with an able child.

Once a disabled child realizes that he or she has a disability the child will, without realizing it at first, use the ability to control their parents. I know fully well, because I did. You as parents must have stronger wills than your disabled children, and at times it is going to be harder on you than your children.

I believe that the Youth Opportunities United can give disabled teens an outlet. The degree of their disability will determine how involved they can be. It can give them the opportunity to be around people their own age, and they will realize that able-bodied teens are dealing with the same kind of feelings that they are.

I moved out on my own when I was 25. This is what you as parents are reaching for—to help your disabled children to be as independent of you as much as their limitations will allow.

I have learned the hard way how others will take advantage of someone who has a disability. Teach your children to stand up for themselves.

Try to develop your children's personality and character. I have seen parents who neglected to do so. When their children reached adulthood, the parents would say: "What happened? Why isn't my child mature?"

Dads, I would like to tell you how proud I am of you at looking beyond the disabilities that your children have. I had many friends whose fathers left because they could not cope with their children's disabilities. Stand up for your wives and children just like God is standing by you.

Building resolves pressing need

This building will house offices and classrooms for the English, Foreign Languages, Classics and Philosophy, and History departments.

"Construction of Jackson Hall will resolve our most pressing need at Ambassador, which is more classroom and office space," said evangelist Donald Ward, Ambassador College president.

"Much of our current classroom space includes buildings originally constructed for an elementary and high school complex."

Rick van Pelt, facilities director for the Church, said: "To provide students with a well-rounded education, a variety of classes must be offered, and this has required us to alleviate the strain on current facilities."

Through the cooperative efforts of Church and College employees, plans for the two-story humanities complex have been developed. Ground-breaking is scheduled for May 15, graduation day.

"Jackson Hall will be the first new building on campus since the major construction effort in 1990, when five dormitories, an administration building, a lecture hall and office complex (now named Ambassador Hall) and an office facility for the Spanish and Italian departments were constructed," said Mr. van Pelt.

Physical vision

Careful consideration has been given to academic programs, activities, fiscal resources and the physical plant, Dr. Ward said.

"The master plan, though only a blueprint, represents the physical vision of the College's future," he continued. "It is a future we look forward to with eager anticipation."

Other summer projects scheduled for completion before the 1992-93 academic year include an addition to the campus band hall and upgrading street and area lighting.

The next project will be new locker and shower facilities for the physical education complex.

The master plan calls for the continued development of an academic park, which will become the academic hub of the campus.

Booth City (the informal name given to once-temporary residences for students) will be demolished over time to allow room for the academic center. New residences will replace the old structures.

"The future Herbert W. Armstrong academic center will consist of a new library, a fine arts center, a new student dining hall, a mass communications complex, a computing center and may eventually include an auditorium," Mr. van Pelt said.

A site has also been chosen for the possible construction of an aquatic center in the physical education complex.

The master plan calls for the present Field House to remain as the physical education facility and the Roy Hammer Library to be transformed into a student union facility.

Member involvement

"Members often ask how they can become more involved in Ambassador College," Mr. Tkach said.

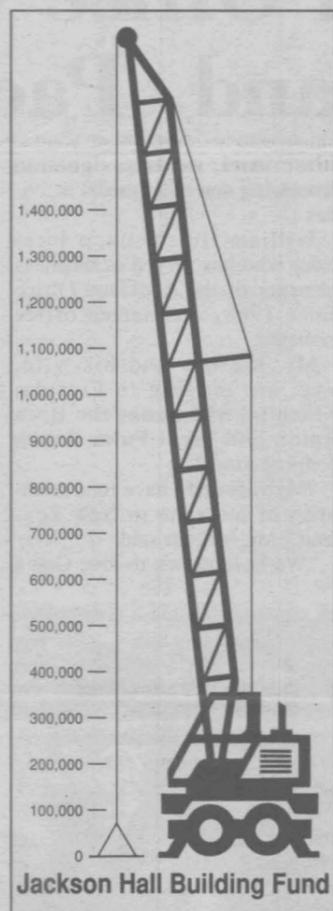

"To allow personal involvement in the construction of Jackson Hall, we are encouraging local congregations to begin fund-raising activities as appropriate to fund the building.

"Members can now contribute directly to the building of a new vision at Ambassador.

"We are not advocating that members finance these projects from their own pockets," Mr. Tkach emphasized.

"If members have spare time to devote to helping raise funds, their involvement in a congregational fund raiser would be a worthy activity."

We intend to acknowledge both congregational and individual donations with an on-site plaque. Details of this program will be provided in the near future.

Donations, whether congregational or individual, should be made to the Church's Building Fund.

However, so the Church can properly acknowledge contributions for the new humanities building, please indicate on your check or money order that your contribution is for that purpose.

Mr. van Pelt estimated the cost of building the Harold L. Jackson Hall of Humanities at $1.4 million.

As the building fund grows, The Worldwide News will report results and plot donations on the chart below.

Pentecost: only a matter of time before our absolute freedom

By Paul Kroll

If we were free of all that enslaves us, wouldn't life be wonderful? Worth living? Wouldn't it be ... well, perfect? Wouldn't we ourselves be perfect?

Paul Kroll is a senior editor for The Plain Truth.

Our ultimate destiny is to have this absolute, total and eternal freedom. We will be free from sin, free from fears, free from human limitations. In that sense, we will be as God is (I John 3:2).

Think, for a moment, how free God is. God doesn't worry about what he will eat, drink, wear or live in. God isn't afraid of being hurt or dying.

God knows there is an answer—a reason—a solution—for everything that happens, so that in the end even the absurd and unjust takes on meaning. God is in control of his mind and faculties and is not tempted to sin.

God is not afraid of an uncertain future. In fact, "uncertain future" is an oxymoron for God because he controls and makes the future what he wants it to be. Above all, God is Spirit and he is life, and eternity.

In short, God is truly free of all fear, of all need. That's why God wants us to be like him because it means we can be truly free as well.

Pentecost: symbol of freedom

What is this freedom the New Testament says we have? The answer points up the day of Pentecost as an important symbol of spiritual freedom.

We know the Holy Spirit was first "poured out" on all people during the day of Pentecost following Christ's resurrection (Acts 2). In his Pentecost sermon, Peter called on his hearers to repent, to be baptized, and to "receive the gift of the Holy Spirit" (verse 38, New International Version throughout).

From that time, Pentecost has symbolized God pouring out his Spirit on human beings (verse 17).

And, we have been among the blessed recipients: "God has poured out his love into our hearts by the Holy Spirit, whom he has given us" (Romans 5:5).

Those who receive God's Spirit are born anew—of the spirit, from above. Besides their old sinful nature or self, God's people have a new, godly self forming within them.

As Peter put it, we "participate in the divine nature and escape the corruption in the world caused by evil desires" (II Peter 1:4).

To escape something is to be free of it. If anything, then, the Holy Spirit in us means absolute freedom for us.

When we have the Spirit—guaranteed at our baptism—working within us we are free from the control of our sinful propensity to sin, and yes, freedom from death. Think about it—forever free of death.

What Pentecost teaches us

In this life we experience only a down payment of that ultimate freedom we are to possess. We still must struggle against sin. We are subject to sorrow, pain and death.

We are no longer slaves to sin, but are freed from sin's bondage. Through Christ's victory over sin, we can live new lives in obedience to him to the glory of God.

nature. And, so, the day of Pentecost symbolizes our freedom in Christ, our liberation.

Value of freedom

Jesus, above all things, promised that his work was meant to set humans at liberty. Jesus said, "If the Son sets you free, you will be free indeed" (John 8:36).

Jesus said he was sent "to proclaim freedom for the prisoners" and "release the oppressed" (Luke 4:18).

Just before his death, Jesus promised his disciples: "I will ask the Father, and he will give you another Counselor to be with you forever" (John 14:16). More than with them, the spirit would be in them (verse 17).

We also have that Spirit through which God and Jesus make their home in our minds (verse 23). That Spirit of Pentecost makes us absolutely free.

Having the Holy Spirit rids us of these enslaving chains that seek to control our lives.

True freedom—complete freedom—personal freedom—makes everything else we could want possible.

Consider what true freedom—as God has freedom—would bring to you and me.

We would be free of fears and worries, free of poverty and economic uncertainty, free of unjust restraints, free of prejudice and bigotry, free of guilt, free of illness and accidents, free of loneliness and feeling inadequate, free of ignorance, free of ugliness, free of the inability to do what we want, free of physical and mental exhaustion, free of enemies. But there's more.

We must not forget to mention the most important freedoms of all—freedom from our own moral weaknesses and addictions, our sion" (Ephesians 1:13-14).

Our absolute freedom is guaranteed by God! It's only a matter of time. And, yet, we already have the deed to our absolute freedom.

When we become children of God through the indwelling spirit of God, our perfection is as good as done. (Of course, we must continue keeping God's faith in us.)

That's why Jesus could say God is not a God of the dead (Matthew 22:32). In a real sense—more real than our lives—those who are dead are as good as alive. And, we are as good as absolutely free.

each of us, Paul still says through his writings: "You have been set free from sin" (Romans 6:18).

"Set free"—what a wonderful thought. We all want to be free of everything that enslaves us, don't we? We have that desire in common with every human who has ever lived.

Free at last!

Remember the late Martin Luther King's "I Have a Dream" speech? He gave it Aug. 28, 1963, 100 years after Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation speech on freeing the negro slaves.

Dr. King's topic was, naturally, freedom. He said despite the racial bigotry still in America, he had a dream.

The dream was that, among other things, blacks could "one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

Dr. King asked that freedom ring throughout America. He prayed for the day when all could be truly free and one in spirit.

Dr. King concluded his speech with words that we, of all people, can appreciate: "Free at last! Free at last! Thank God Almighty, we are free at last!"

Those words echo and articulate our most deep-seated yearnings to be free. They reflect the Pentecost spirit of both the reality-in-waiting and future hope of our freedom.

We already have the down payment of the Spirit and the title to its fullness. As we think of the meaning of Pentecost, let's remember Martin Luther King's resounding words that reflect the true freedom we have in Christ: "Free at last! Free at last! Thank God Almighty, we are free at last!"

Brethren inspired by Holy Day card

"Oh, what a beautiful Passover card.... What a fantastic scene that must have been," wrote Mrs. Oliver J. Bergeron Jr. of Chalmette, La., in response to the spring festival greeting card Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach sent brethren in early April.

Mike Wimmer's illustration on the card (below) captures the epic qualities of one of the most spectacular events in history—the children of Israel crossing the Red Sea.

"Thank you so much, such an uplift, a new year, another chance to renew all dedication to the great almighty God," wrote Mrs. Bergeron.

"Thank you so much for the beautiful card, for fitting words at the right time," said Mrs. William S. Nichols Sr. of La Vernia, Tex. "I must say it brought tears to my eyes and at the same time joy to my heart. It's the best one ever."

The majestic figure of Moses dominates the scene. His budding rod and outstretched arms seem to beckon the Israelites to safe passage. Behind the rock, to Moses' right, Aaron stares intently at the parted waters.

Beside the rock, to Moses' left, stands the courageous figure of Joshua, who carries the standard of the tribe of Ephraim. The insignia of Issachar can be seen at the lower right.

Illustrator Mr. Wimmer, a member who attends the Oklahoma City, Okla., church, consulted various sources in creating the painting, including archaeologist and historian Henry S. Noerdlinger.

PERSONAL

these deeply significant occasions to worship and glorify the God of our salvation, let's remember that Jesus Christ is the substance, the essence, the real meaning behind them.

He is the Author and Finisher of our faith and, as his brothers and sisters, all we do should revolve around him. As Paul wrote, "Having been buried with him in baptism and raised with him through your faith in the power of God, who raised him from the dead" (Colossians 2:12, New International Version).

Along these lines, I hope we can see that it is of no consequence whether one eats unleavened bread every day during the Festival of Unleavened Bread, for example. (Some have wondered whether it would be wrong if they missed a day, since Exodus 13:6 [NKJ] says, "Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread.")

Eating unleavened bread is a symbol of our new "unleavened" spiritual condition resulting from faith in Jesus Christ (I Corinthians 5:7). It is not the eating of the bread that makes us spiritually unleavened.

It is the sacrifice of Christ (Romans 3:22, 5:1). It should not become a spiritual issue if we miss eating unleavened bread a day or two during the Festival.

Thank you sincerely for your prayers for God's guidance and inspiration as we grow in the light of his word.

Please remember to pray for those who have left the fellowship, that God will help those who are confused or disturbed about doctrinal changes. Pray that God will give them willing and faithful hearts to desire his will and to understand his word.

While change is necessary, it is also difficult for some. We should not treat them as enemies, but as brothers and sisters who need our prayers.

Some have been influenced or deceived by dishonest and heretical writings of former members or ministers who (either deliberately or ignorantly—it's not always easy to tell) grossly misrepresent the changes God has led his Church to make.

Others are simply confused and in need of God's help. Whatever the reason, let's pray for them and for the blind guides who are leading some of them astray.

Please pray for me, that I will have the courage to go where God leads. And never cease to pray for one another.

Conference in South Africa: cultures meet in harmony

By Larry Salyer

I visited South Africa for the Feb. 24 to 27 ministerial conference that brought together the full-time ministers living in Africa.

Evangelist Larry Salyer is director of Church Administration International.

Though we had some good-natured banter about whether this was the first all-Africa conference, it certainly was the first since the Church has had native African ministers serving the congregations throughout Africa.

East and West Africa are part of the British region and are supervised by evangelist Les McCullough. Southern Africa, which includes Zimbabwe and Zambia, is supervised by Andre van Belkum.

Both men presented profitable lectures and joined me for a question-and-answer session. On the last day of the conference the regional directors conducted separate meetings to deal with issues exclusive to each region.

The conference took place at a resort hotel in the scenic Drakensberg Mountains, about halfway between Johannesburg and Durban.

South Africa is a beautiful and productive land, and its industrial and economic infrastructure is highly developed.

On the surface it appears to be a First World country. However, a majority of the population lives in Third World conditions and feels their plight is a result of the government's policy of apartheid. At any rate, the challenge facing the nation now is to look forward, not backward.

It was truly a remarkable experience to meet in peace and harmony with men and women of numerous racial, ethnic and national identities. Clearly, we were all citizens of a higher government, the kingdom of God.

It was inspiring to see this group come together for the opening social event. Many had not met those from outside their own region and were anxious to do so.

As I know all of them personally, it gave me great joy to see them getting acquainted and expressing mutual respect and appreciation for work done in their environments.

As the meetings progressed, we shared heartfelt concern as we discussed the challenges faced by our brethren throughout this continent that covers one fifth of the land surface of the earth.

Sharing examples of problems ministers in various cultures have to deal with was interesting and educational for all. I think everybody profited from this increased awareness of the varying conditions in which God is calling people and of the application of God's word in meeting these conditions.

Of course, we had the usual fun and humor common to gatherings of ministers and wives. There was no shortage of stories about unusual experiences and embarrassing situations. The fellowship was warm and encouraging.

The ministers and their wives God has called to serve brethren throughout Africa are doing the job extremely well.

They are a fine group of people with whom I am pleased to work. Please remember them and the churches they serve in your prayers. Most face an uncertain future, tempered by their spiritual hope.

"Sabbath services in Eureka normally start at 1 p.m. but were delayed until 1:30 p.m. because of the earthquake," Mr. King said.

"When we arrived at the hall, there still was no power. About halfway through the sermonette, the power came on, which was good because we were planning to play Mr. Tkach's tape for the sermon.

"About five minutes after the tape was completed, the power went back off."

School equipment redeemed from grocery receipts

Imperial Schools in Pasadena collected more than $688,000 in grocery store receipts in the Vons Companies 1991-92 Apples for the Students program, and more than $50,000 in receipts in the Lucky Stores Register Tapes for Education program.

Imperial Schools will redeem the Vons Companies receipts for two Macintosh LC color computer systems and educational software.

The Lucky Stores receipts will be redeemed for two sets of 10 Casio scientific calculators.

"Programs like these help Imperial to acquire educational equipment we would otherwise not be able to afford. I would like to thank everyone who has helped us accomplish our goal," said Joseph

Locke, Imperial Schools superintendent.

Imperial Schools started receiving receipts before the Feast of Tabernacles and set a goal to match last year's Apples for the Students program total of $660,000 by the end of the program Jan. 31.

Church helps victims of explosions in Guadalajara

GUADALAJARA, Mexico—A series of underground gas explosions killed more than 200 people here April 22, according to Gilberto Marin, pastor of the Guadalajara church. No members were hurt or suffered property damage in the blasts.

Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach announced that the Worldwide Church of God will participate in the relief effort by sending $100,000 to appropriate relief agencies.

"If we are indeed Christlike individuals we are constantly thinking about the poor unfortunates of this world," Mr. Tkach said. He quoted Galatians 6:10: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Because of the emergency, only one service was conducted on the last day of Unleavened Bread in Guadalajara. The Feast of Tabernacles will take place here as scheduled.

Member Daniel Garcia, 30, who lives one block from the disaster area, was working on his car when the first explosion occurred.

People were running, bleeding, crying, screaming and asking for help.

"I ran to see what was happening and to help," Mr. Garcia said. "To my amazement the street had disappeared. In its place was a wide trench, in most places three meters deep. Cars, buses and trucks were turned around. Homes were destroyed and injured people were everywhere."

Mr. Garcia helped rescue people and belongings until he was exhausted.

The 160 brethren in Guadalajara thank brethren worldwide for their prayers.
