

Mr. Armstrong completes Latin tour; doors opened for future meetings

PASADENA — Herbert W. Armstrong and an entourage of members of the Japanese Diet returned here Wednesday, Aug. 28, after a seven-nation tour which carried them through portions of Central and South America.

The nations visited, using the Ambassador College-owned Grumman Gulfstream-II jet, were Mexico, Panama, Guatemala, Peru, Ecuador, Brazil and the Dominican Republic.

After returning to the United States, Mr. Armstrong during a stop-over in Washington on Tuesday,

Aug. 27, was decorated with what Stanley Rader, general counsel for the Work, called "the highest order of the royal Hashemite Kingdom [of Jordan]."

He was presented with the honor by Jordanian Ambassador to the United States Abdullah Salah, who acted on behalf of King Hussein.

Mr. Rader, who accompanied Mr. Armstrong, said Mr. Armstrong plans to leave Monday, Sept. 2, for Tokyo, where he will conduct a Bible study for Plain Truth subscribers and other interested persons Sept. 7. It is estimated that 300 to 500 will attend.

"It was all an outstanding success," Mr. Rader said of the just-completed Latin American tour. "[The Japanese] have opened doors for Mr. Armstrong [in all of the countries visited]."

He added that as a result of the tour, he and Osamu Gotoh, Ambassador College's director of Asian studies, who also went on the trip, met chiefs of protocol in the countries visited, and that future appointments will be set up with their presidents and any other government leaders that Ambassador College wishes to contact.

"We told [the Latin American officials] briefly about our public appearances in other areas as well as our testimonial dinners," Mr. Rader said. "They all showed great interest in being a part of that, and we're planning on visiting extensively in that connection probably in December or January of this coming year."

Mr. Rader said all but two of the Diet members were to return immediately to Tokyo from here, where they are to take part in discussions and a debriefing session in preparation for a state visit by Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Tanaka to Mexico and Brazil later this month.

Japanese Gratitude

Mr. Rader said that at an Aug. 27 banquet in Washington, the Japanese expressed their gratitude to Mr. Armstrong for the assistance Ambassador College has given them.

"They were extremely grateful because they know that they would be unable to make the kind of effort that they did in such a limited period of time without the utilization of the [G-II] aircraft and the crew and the help of Mr. Armstrong, me and Mr.

Police veteran gives lecture at start of celebrity series

By Les Stocker

PASADENA — Joseph Wambaugh, author of The New Centurions, The Blue Knight and The Onion Field, appeared in the Ambassador Auditorium Thursday evening, Aug. 22, before a crowd of students, members of the faculty and guests.

Mr. Wambaugh is also production consultant for Police Story, an American television series discussing realism in police life. His talk included an hour-long movie.

Mr. Wambaugh is known for his candid disclosure of police life. He was an officer in the Los Angeles police department for 14 years.

Dangerous Emotionally

In his Auditorium address Mr. Wambaugh said, "[As a policeman] you see the worst of people and people at their worst."

TV Guide magazine of Aug. 17 quoted Mr. Wambaugh as saying: "Police work is not particularly dangerous physically, but the most

A Personal Letter

from

Herbert W. Armstrong

Dear Brethren in Christ:

Greetings! Mr. Armstrong is back in Pasadena for this weekend as I write this "Personal" but will be leaving again almost immediately for a trip which will take him to the Far East and on into Egypt and Israel for testimonial dinners.

[For further information on Mr. Armstrong's trip, see the lead article beginning on this page.]

This is the next to the last issue of The Worldwide News prior to the Feast of Tabernacles! It is hard to realize that another summer is almost gone and that another Feast of Tabernacles is almost upon us, with another school year well under way!

Incidentally, I am told from all levels in both colleges that we are off to the most enthusiastic and inspiring college year in anyone's memory! I was able to attend some of the opening events of Ambassador College in Big Sandy and to take the first forum and attend other events at the opening of the college here in Pasadena.

It is a very warm and enthusiastic group on both campuses, with the very largest incoming freshman classes in our history. And of course it is extremely interesting to hear the many accents and to see the many

NOTICE!

In order for readers to receive the next issue of The Worldwide News before leaving their homes for the Feast of Tabernacles, the next issue will be printed Sept. 12 and will be the last issue printed before the Feast. No issue will be printed during the Feast, but after the Feast the normal printing schedule will be resumed.

Overpopulation spurs U.N. conference

POPULATION BOOM — Delegates to the United Nations World Population Conference in Bucharest, Rumania, listen to opening-day speeches on Aug. 19. Delegates came from more than 120 nations.

By Ray Kosanke

BUCHAREST, Rumania — The United Nations World Population Conference, held here Aug. 19 through 30, drew delegates from 120 nations and some 660 journalists from around the world.

The participants are hard working and sincere. Every effort has been made for the success of the conference, the goal of which is formal agreement to a "World Plan of Action" that has been painstakingly drawn up over the last several months. Antonio Carrillo-Flores, secretary general of the conference, has taken three trips around the world, seeking a general consensus.

What is obvious here — as in Stockholm in 1972 at the U.N. Environmental Conference — is that the scope and authority of the United Nations as a body are not great enough to achieve definite solutions to the enormous problems of population, food, social justice, pollution, worldwide inflation and world peace.

While many recognize this fact, it is hoped that discussing the problems, leading nations to a general understanding of the problems and

Market speculation, margin buying can be risky business for amateurs

By Robert D. Ellsworth and Arnold Van Den Berg
PASADENA — A unique characteristic of an inflationary economy is the dramatic increase in speculation and nonproductive activities. In times such as these it becomes prudent for the average individual to realize that speculation in such areas as currency markets, commodities

Mr. Ellsworth is registered with the National Association of Securities Dealers. Mr. Van Den Berg is president of Century Investment Management and is registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission as an investment counselor. He has lectured extensively on inflation and economics. Mr. Ellsworth is employed by Ambassador College.

and gold and silver futures is dangerous and is definitely not for the amateur. It is a classic example of how partial knowledge in a given area can be extremely harmful. In more nearly normal times — with low inflation and predictable prices — price stability in itself tends to create an orderly marketplace in which the exchange of goods and services is carried out without fear of volatile price fluctuations. Opportunities for large profits through pure speculation are rare, and, generally, profits are made through production, marketing and the normal channels of enterprise. Inflation encourages the opposite effect.

Distorted Economy
 Inflation causes instability in the marketplace. This instability creates distortions in the economy and hampers an orderly exchange of goods and services because of the inability to predict prices and profit margins. Such confusion and uncertainty tend to create a volatile marketplace with wide price swings. The more volatile the marketplace, the more difficult it becomes for companies, and individuals, to be profitable. It is the very presence of these financial distortions and volatile price fluctuations that encourages such activities as speculation in currency markets, commodities and gold and silver futures.

It is this very type of speculation that recently led to the downfall of Germany's largest private bank, I.D. Herstatt. This Cologne-based financial institution, with assets of $885 million, was forced to close its doors after it was revealed it had suffered enormous losses in foreign-exchange trading on the currency market. Known to professionals as gungslunging, this practice of trying to outguess the wide fluctuations in international currency values also just cost Union Bank of Switzerland more than $34 million in losses. Closer to home, Franklin National Bank of Brooklyn, N.Y., America's 20th largest, had to be rescued by a $1.1 billion government loan for losses incurred in the same area.

Dangerous Arena
 Unfortunately, large institutions are not the only ones that fall victim to the lure of making a fast dollar in times of rising inflation. The small investor, squeezed by rising prices and seeing the opportunity for what he hopes to be a quick profit, often ventures into the same dangerous arena of speculation and margin buying. It is the small investor who can least afford to lose and who should be especially prudent and cautious with his funds in any investment situation. Here are just some of the pitfalls involved in speculation and margin buying:

 ● If you buy on margin, you cannot take possession of the commodity you purchase. In this situation, many dealers do not "cover" sales. This means that dealers who hold inventory for clients are able to sell the same commodity several times. In the event the market goes against the dealer, the investor has no assurance the dealer really has the merchandise. In the area of commodity sales, several companies have recently experienced problems in this very area.
 ● The market tends to be volatile because of reactions to international conditions. In extreme market declines, however temporary, the buyer could be forced to come up with extra cash for margin calls. This is often in addition to storage charges and interest due on the unpaid balance.

 ● Historically, the majority of those who buy on margin end up losing. The average person is not aware of and cannot afford the tremendous risks involved in speculation and margin buying. This area should definitely be left to professional speculators, who themselves, as we have seen, often lose.

DATELINE--

✓ MANILA — Residents of greater Manila and the island of Luzon finally heaved a sigh of relief as the sun shone last week after eight days of unusually heavy monsoon rains. Metropolitan Manila reeled under rains induced by Typhoon Norming.

The week-long rains unfolded a tale of woe and misery, death and destruction for the inhabitants of Manila and 13 Luzon provinces. Several national roads and bridges were rendered impassable by floodwaters. In some areas floodwaters rose to 18 feet. The Department of Public Highways initially placed the damage to roads and bridges at $5.2 million, and the figures are expected to triple as soon as all the reports are in. The death toll, mostly by drowning, as of Aug. 27 was placed at 61 by Red Cross officials. Almost one million persons were affected. Although no definite figure was available on damage to crops and properties, destruction is expected to run high. Colin Adair.

 ✓ DUESSELDORF — When the Arab oil embargo was lifted last March, the oil crisis was actually far from over. Giant money problems, on a scale never before encountered, have emerged in the wake of skyrocketing crude-oil prices that are now four times higher than preembargo days. The European Economic Community countries of Italy, Britain, France, Ireland and Denmark together will run a devastating trade deficit this year of about $20 billion. Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands are just about at equilibrium. Only West Germany will show a trade surplus. All of the industrialized nations of the free world together will probably suffer a trade deficit of $40 billion or more. Some experts now say the rich nations may actually go bankrupt trying to pay for the oil to keep their industries moving. What's even more ominous is that the gigantic deficits in balance of payments of oil-buying nations are fueling inflation, which was already threatening to go out of control before the new, quadrupled oil prices. One Swiss banker stunned Europeans recently when he suggested that a country like Italy or Britain may have no alternative out of the liquidity problem except to call a moratorium on payments of their debts for one year. If this were to happen, a panic-motivated run on the banks could result. Frank Schnee.

 ✓ JOHANNESBURG — In contrast to the devastation of a large part of the U.S. corn crop by a crippling drought in July, South African farmers are presently cashing in on a record corn harvest of 11 million tons, against a previous record of 9.8 million tons in 1967-68. But in the rest of Africa the food picture is bleak indeed. Large tracts of the continent have been and are still in the grip of a severe and protracted drought. The sub-Saharan area has suffered greatly; the unusually severe drought in this vast area was followed by torrential rains, which further aggravated the situation. Other areas have still had little relief from the drought. Zambia, for example, has experienced severe crop failure and is relying heavily on corn imported from South Africa. Bob Fahey.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

How-larious
 It seems that Mr. [Basil] Wolverton's cartoons ["Third Thoughts"] get lambasted in every few issues by someone who can't see how utterly how-larious human beings are. I sincerely hope the inhabitants of this globe, Arabs included, can see the lighter side of the nature God gave us and be able to chuckle at our silly, vain attempts to be what we're not.
 Mrs. Paul C. Williams
 Dallas, Tex.

We couldn't have said it better!

Feast idea
 Just read [Garner Ted Armstrong's] latest letter in the WW [July 22]. Great. Had an idea that perhaps we should send more money later — would feel guilty if local bank collapsed while extra money was in there. Also, last year we bought about 50 pounds of prime hindquarter beef — took it to the Poconos frozen and invited all we could handle to come over for barbecues — just great — will do so again this year. God says to take what we can with us — okay. So we will. We can buy a lot cheaper here than we can in the resort area.
 Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Chapman
 Southbridge, Mass.

Record patience
 We nearly went BUGS as day by day the postman came, but failed to deliver our record, SPREADSOME SUNSHINE [The Worldwide News, March 18]. Several visits to the post office in THE VILLAGE, some of them on RAINY DAYS even, were of no avail. "HEY, LOOK AROUND." I told the parcel-post girl, "Maybe our disc got slipped behind a larger package." (Since everyone would like this to be a WORLD FULL OF LOVE, I even offered her to TAKE MY HAND so we could search together, but my wife, VIRTUOUS WOMAN that she is, said, "Nix.") When all seemed hopeless, my wife declared, "Well, GIVING IS A WAY OF LIFE, and perhaps we should just forget the whole thing and treat the $5 as a gift to Ambassador College." Now it was time for me to say, "Nix." I continued, "The money doesn't matter, but we do want the record." So I wrote a letter to Texas, and finally after a lo-o-o-g time, A MOVIN' STRANGER delivered a card saying our record was at the Canadian customs office. WHAT IS JOY? We discovered it when, finally, the music of the Ambassador College Band and the New World Singers issued forth from our stereo, telling us to SMILE UPON YOUR BROTHER.

Mushrooming list
 The July 22 WW arrived yesterday. What news! It is really awesome to observe the mushrooming list of contacts with important world leaders. Mr. Garner Ted Armstrong's "Personal Letter" has some real helpful suggestions for economy and "getting back to the grass roots" of the Feast without compromising the purpose of the Feast. Please pass on a big "thanks" for his help. . . . and assure him that the obvious concern and reasonable decisions and suggestions from headquarters make it very desirable to follow the authority vested in him and other headquarters and field men ordained of God.
 Gordon Gueller
 Muscatine, Iowa

Both sides
 In regard to Mr. Nixon [The Worldwide News, Aug. 19]: Before we judge anyone we should get both sides of the issue. The news media has given us only one side — all distorted and with great contempt for a man who everyone has to admit has done what others could not to end a war he didn't start. It makes me ashamed and sad. We in God's Church know what it is like to receive vicious untruths from the news media and we as God's people should be above that. . . . It's dishonest to condemn a man without a hearing. . . . Nixon is no longer President but his trials are far from over for him, his family and America. He deserves our prayers as much as Ford. I'm sure Mr. Ford will not do anything to offend the powers that be in government. I'm glad there is a breather for God's Work now that Nixon is out but I can do no less than defend a man who has been so wronged.

The Great Texas Cattle Weight Loss
 Either I'm dreaming or my eyes are deceiving me as to what I'm seeing printed on the last page of the July 8, 1974, copy of The Worldwide News under the heading "Cattle Drive Dramatizes Complaint of Ranchers About Low Beef Prices." That is . . . quote: "DURING THE TWO-MILE TREK EACH COW LOST 50 TO 100 POUNDS, etc. etc." unquote. Whose leg is being pulled here anyway??? One pound of fat is approximately the equivalent of 3,500 calories! Now, in order to lose one pound of fat one would have to lose — burn up — those 3,500 calories in expended energy. How was it possible for each cow to burn up so many times over this number of calories on a puny TWO-MILE TREK???? Surely your reporters have been duped or a mistake in typing has occurred, or I'm personally just plain imagining things, or those Texas cows are most truly some quite exceptional critters. . . . I've no doubt that many other of your readers are also greatly wondering at the solution to this case of "The Great Texas Cattle Weight Loss!"
 Leonard L. Donesley
 Edmonton, Alta.

Sorry, but you're all wet about your beef. Your premise doesn't hold water, but cattle do. The weight loss was not in terms of body tissue, as you erroneously assumed. A cow's weight will fluctuate because of the amount of "gut-fill" it has, according to Dr. Myron McCartor, assistant professor of animal nutrition at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Overton, Tex. Since our credibility was at stake, we asked Dr. McCartor to help us if he could. His choice reply was that the digestive tract of a cow can hold upwards of 50 gallons of liquid and feed. One gallon of water weighs approximately eight pounds. Dr. McCartor confirmed that it is very possible for a cow to lose this much weight from the digestive tract — especially in 100-degree heat. We hope this isn't utterly confusing, but we feel Dr. McCartor's explanation carries some weight.

Unidentified ham
 In the Aug. 19 article on Mr. [Ronald] Dart's ham-radio schedule, there was no mention of his call letters. It would make it much easier to identify him on the air if the other amateur operators knew his call letters.

Long, hot summer

Drought damages Nebraska corn; some may lose entire year's crop

By Dave Havir

OMAHA, Neb. — The summer's drought has severely damaged the corn crop in Nebraska.

"We haven't gotten our share of rain in Nebraska and western Iowa," said a representative of the University of Nebraska's agricultural extension service here. "And while we have been recently experiencing periodic thunderstorms throughout parts of the state, it has just not been enough to make much of a change in the corn situation we face. You might say that these cloudbursts are too little too late."

Following record-high temperatures the past two months, many farmers are now filing for government disaster payments because of damaged corn crops. Not all of the corn crop has been adversely affected, but it is a high percentage of the bushels usually harvested.

According to the extension-service representative:

"It's a situation where some people will make quite a bit of money and others may lose their entire crop. Dry-land corn has undergone a substantial loss because of heat. But since parts of Nebraska are irrigated, we will still be fortunate to have some form of corn harvest."

Letters Sent

One of the services of the extension service is writing to farmers, advising them how to get the most from their crops. Some of the letters they are now sending out give an accurate picture of what the farmers face. Titles of the letters they are sending include: "Using Drought-Damaged Crops," "Drought Tolerance Varies by Crop" and "How Much Is Drought-Damaged Corn Worth as Silage?"

Corn does not have a good ability to withstand prolonged moisture deficiency, said the extension representative. The crop will continue to grow until available water is not sufficient for growth. Then "firing" will occur.

Under drought stress, corn may produce tassels, but no silks will appear. Or silking may be delayed enough that pollination does not occur. Under these conditions, no grain will be produced even if rain does occur. However, if rain does occur before the plants die, additional plant growth may result. Therefore, forage yields could be increased.

Can more rain salvage this year's corn? In most of the cases where the corn has not received enough moisture, it is too late.

As one farmer said: "The rain will always help. No, it won't help my corn crop this year. But the rain will help my land for next year."

Farmers who have suffered severe drought are seeking ways to salvage as much value from the damaged corn as possible. Many are wondering what it would be worth as silage.

"The farmers are making silage to salvage the crop," reported the extension representative. "Everyone asks whether more rain can salvage the corn, enabling the harvest of a soft corn. I am almost certain that we will see a lot of silage."

Farmers are still desiring rain for some of the other crops. More rain could help soybeans, the third cutting of alfalfa ("which we didn't expect") and the fall pasture ("which has been eaten pretty short and still needs time to recover").

Widespread Effect

It has been said that this is the worst year since 1955 and 1956. The extension spokesman explained that there have been dry years which have affected different areas throughout the Midwest. Yet, this year the effect has been more widespread.

What is the main concern of farmers at this present time?

"Everyone is concerned about the complete unpredictability and fluctuation of prices," said the representative. "Cattle feeders have been hit very hard in the last year."

Newspapers throughout much of the country have been asking how much this year's drought-damaged corn will affect cattle prices next year. According to the representative:

"At this point, that's a good guess. But it appears that caution will have to make changes in how they feed their cattle. That could either be good or bad. . . . It could be more important than we now believe."

International Division head holds Australian campaign

By Dennis G. Luker

BRISBANE, Australia — Leslie L. McCullough of Pasadena, director of the International Division, conducted a campaign here Aug. 2 and 3. This was the third campaign to be conducted in a major Australian city.

Brisbane is the capital city of the state of Queensland, with a population of 911,000. The Plain Truth circulation within a 100-mile radius is approximately 7,000, including the Toowoomba-church area. It was estimated that about 10 percent of the Plain Truth's subscribers would attend.

Including the attendance of Church members from Brisbane and Toowoomba, an attendance was expected of at least 1,000 the first night.

As it turned out, the total attendance of nonmembers and Church members was 1,060 the first night of the campaign, without about half being new people."

On the second night 665 attended, including 330 nonmembers, half of these being there for the first time.

Campaign Topics

Mr. McCullough spoke of conditions in Southeast Asia and Australia and the disastrous floods which hit this country in January.

Brisbane was hit by the worst flood this century, and 10,000 people were flooded out of their homes, with many permanently damaged or destroyed.

Mr. McCullough spoke about the problems in the world today and how Australia would also be affected by end-time events.

The second night he showed that the only way of escape is to repent and turn to God. He told those in the audience that their lives were in their own hands.

Even though serious fuel shortages were developing as the result of industrial strikes, 17 nonmembers showed up for the first follow-up Bible study, and 31 attended the second one.

Steve Martin, Mr. McCullough's assistant, was master of ceremonies. Mr. Martin's experience in emceeing many campaigns in the United States was helpful in properly organizing and conducting the Brisbane campaign.

The brethren in Brisbane and Toowoomba supported the campaign by raising $5,000 (U.S. $7,500), which will cover most of the expenses for the campaign in their area.

Campaign Supplements

While here, Mr. McCullough approved plans to conduct special Bible studies for Plain Truth subscribers in Australian cities where campaigns may not be practical. These Bible studies begin in Adelaide, capital city of South Australia, Sept. 2 and 3.

In November three main cities of the island state of Tasmania (Hobart, Launceston and Devonport) are scheduled for campaigns.

In early December Wollongong, an industrial city 50 miles south of Sydney, is scheduled for a Bible study.

Plans are now being drawn up to conduct these meetings for Plain Truth subscribers throughout Australia in 1975.

These Bible studies hopefully will motivate interested Plain Truth readers into action.

Many people have written in saying they didn't realize the Work had churches and ministers. This new program is designed to help stimulate the growth of churches and the Work in this country.

New Orleans elder blows own horn, becomes a prominent trumpeter

By David Joplin

NEW ORLEANS, La. — He says because he never knew any better he started playing the piano at 4½.

At 12 he changed to the trumpet, and stayed with it — mastering it and eventually becoming a prominent New Orleans musician.

He is Paul Herrmann, 48, a local elder here. Mr. Herrmann has been out of music professionally for the past eight years but prior to that spent 25 years in the profession.

High school gave him a good start. For one thing, he was able to trade ideas and techniques with other aspiring musicians.

One in particular Mr. Herrmann came to know was a young man named Al Hirt.

It seems "Jumbo," as Al Hirt was then called, was interested in the trumpet too, so he and Mr. Herrmann spent many hours practicing together.

No wonder their band, victorious in city and state competition, was sent to play in the 1939 World's Fair in New York. They had a little talent.

Even back in high school Mr. Herrmann remembers Al Hirt as being a natural, confident player.

"If it was possible to get something out of the horn, he would do it," reflects Mr. Herrmann.

In fact, he said, Mr. Hirt was probably as good then as he is now.

Al Hirt's brother Gerald and Paul Herrmann both received music scholarships and attended Southeastern Louisiana University in Hammond together. Gerald Hirt was, according to Mr. Herrmann, an excellent trombone player.

Music Didn't Suffer

In 1944, only a short year and a half away from graduation, Mr. Herrmann left college for the Navy.

His music training certainly didn't suffer, though.

For starters he sang in the choir at Great Lakes Boot Camp, near Chicago, Ill., and was then sent to the Navy's school of music in Washington, D.C.

Out of the school in 1945, he was assigned to the Seventh Fleet Admiral's Band in the Philippines. He played lead trumpet in the band, was in charge of the entire brass section, and wrote arrangements.

Some things simply remain a part of you and you can never forget them. And time, for all of its passing, can't dull the sharpness from your memory. One of those events for Mr. Herrmann happened at 10 a.m. March 5, 1946. He was discharged from the Navy. Then he was free to jump headlong into music.

Mr. Herrmann returned to New Orleans and finished college, graduating with a bachelor-of-music degree and a state teacher's certificate.

But he never became a teacher. "They only made $50 a week in those days," explains Mr. Herrmann.

He could make considerably more playing music.

The French Quarter here in New Orleans is notorious for spawning, incubating and hatching scores of musicians. It makes some famous, giving them life and money, while it strangles and destroys others. Mr. Herrmann elected to try his luck and fortune right here in the nation's hotbed of jazz.

Termite Company

The second club he ever worked at

TRUMPETER — Paul Herrmann, local elder in New Orleans, La., has played trumpet with Al Hirt. Mr. Herrmann spent 25 years as a professional musician. (Photo by David Joplin) in the Quarter is the one Al Hirt now owns. At that time Mr. Herrmann was occasionally playing with Mr. Hirt, but, he reflects, "I think he was considering chucking it, maybe going to work for a termite company."

Mr. Herrmann too was considering quitting; no one he knew had done anything sensational; there was virtually no security; he couldn't see his career leading anywhere.

At this time he and another musician friend of his, Sam Butera, were working together in the club that would soon be Al Hirt's.

At this juncture Mr. Herrmann got married and understandably took some time for a short honeymoon. He returned to find everyone in his band fired. But, then, that's life in the Quarter.

In 1949 that very same club was bought by Al Hirt and a man named Dan Levy. It's still there and Al Hirt still plays there.

Mr. Herrmann stayed in music part time but went into sales for his bread and butter.

About this time Al Hirt got a new booking agent, locked onto a talent show and made it big.

Paul Herrmann and Al Hirt did continue playing together at various times over the years.

One event in particular that normally found the two blowing away together on their trumpets was the annual New Orleans Shrine Circus. Mr. Herrmann says that playing in the circus (which he did for 16 years) was difficult; the music charts were long-awaited tour to Burma, where we have 40 requests for baptism in the Chin Hills northwest of Mandalay and another area southwest of Rangoon. I plan to make stops in Rangoon and Mandalay, since it is difficult to get permission to travel all the way up into the Chin Hills. The people of the hilly areas are not blessed with regular plane landings because of frequent engine trouble and bad weather.

Earlier this year, when I was planning a trip to Burma, all universities, colleges and other schools there were ordered closed in the aftermath of rioting and demonstrations which erupted near Rangoon University. At least five demonstrators were killed.

In other incidents 22 people were killed and 16 injured when Burmese troops opened fire on demonstrators at a textile factory and a dockyard near Rangoon.

Shortly before this two men who were looking for a pair of stolen oxen were lynched by some 50 people of another village.

Cautious Buddhists

Organizing a tour to some of these areas takes careful planning, and of course we always need God's protection and a lot of wisdom and discretion. The Buddhist nation of Burma is cautious about allowing any new religions to be introduced.

As soon as I can fit it into my schedule I need to make a tour of all the capital cities of West Malaysia, where I have 42 more visit and baptism requests.

We have recently had our first student accepted at Ambassador College. Miss Teo Bin Hong has been hoping and planning and saving for years to go to Ambassador College and is now making last-minute plans (as I write) to leave her teaching job in Kota Bharu, Malaysia, for one of the biggest events of her life.

Bin Hong and the entire Teo family have been very faithful and dedicated and loyal to God's Work for years, since Wayne Cole baptized them on one of the early tours to this area. I am sure she will make a fine student at Ambassador, and her twin sister Bin Hoo may soon be the first girl to work in the regional office here in Singapore.

old and tattered. But, he says, "Hirt would come in and sit next to me there and play it like he's been playing it all his life."

Mr. Herrmann came into God's Church in 1960 and was ordained a local elder in 1971 at the Feast in Big Sandy. He started the choir here in New Orleans and conducted it up until recently.

He used to play the piano for services, and currently he heads up the New Orleans church's band. The only playing he does now is for church functions.

"For the most part I don't miss it," reflects Mr. Herrmann regarding his music career. "However, I do enjoy the contribution of being able to play for church functions."

Singapore proves to be a good office site

By Guy Ames

Director, Southeast Asia Region SINGAPORE — The more one travels throughout Southeast Asia, the more obvious it becomes that the small island republic of Singapore is the ideal location for a regional office of God's Work.

There are now more than 400 American companies with operations here.

Singapore has one of the largest and most efficient seaports on earth.

Because of Singapore's non-aligned foreign policy, nearly every trading nation in the world patronizes its efficient port and repair yards. Singapore services Soviet merchant ships as well as the United States' Seventh Fleet.

Peking and Taiwan both have businesses here, while Singapore has joint ventures with the Arabs and the Israelis.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew demands hard work from Singaporeans and tolerates little dissent.

The Plain Truth regional office was established here in Singapore early this year, on the 40th anniversary of the Plain Truth magazine.

Regular Sabbath services began here on the first weekend of January, 1974, with an attendance of 28 adults and three children. This coincided with the 40th anniversary of the World Tomorrow broadcast.

On the mailing list for the Plain Truth in Southeast Asia are 40,000 subscribers, with most of them living in Malaysia and Singapore. By having an office here, PT readers are able to write to the office for the equivalent of four U.S. cents in Singapore and six cents from Malaysia, compared to 20 cents to Australia or 40 cents to the U.S.

The first office employee was baptized by evangelist Wayne Cole on the first tour to Southeast Asia 12 years ago. He and his wife live in Malaysia. At present he is working four days a week and keeps the mail going out as fast as it is received.

As soon as the work load increases sufficiently, the office plans to hire a secretary. At the moment, there is no broadcast and no advertising here; the Plain Truth mailing list grows daily via word of mouth from interested subscribers. It costs nothing in media to add new subscribers.

Most subscribers are young businessmen and teachers and students at the university and high-school level.

There are two churches, one in Singapore and one in Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital. The Kuala Lumpur church meets every third Sabbath and the Singapore group meets every Sabbath when I am in town.

Below the Wind

At the beginning of July this year I had a visiting tour to all the major cities in East Malaysia and Brunei. This was the first tour to East Malaysia in three years. After spending the Sabbath in Kuala Lumpur, I flew to Kota Kinabalu, the capital of Sabah (formerly Jesselton, North Borneo).

Sabah is called "The Land Below the Wind," which may explain why the Philippines has expressed an interest in the area. The entire Philippines, from Aparri to Zamboanga, is in the typhoon zone and gets its share of wind and wet each year.

Sabah is just below this typhoon zone and enjoys lovely Hawaiian-type weather.

While in Kota Kinabalu, I met our one and only member, who has been steadfast, faithful and loyal since Mr. Cole and Arthur Docken baptized him nearly five years ago. I also met with two prospective members.

From Sabah I flew to Brunei, a small British protectorate, which claims to have the largest water village in the world. There are around 7,000 homes built on stilts over the Brunei River. This village hosts a population of some 20,000 people and about as many cats.

My next stop was Miri, in the northern part of Sarawak, where I met a young man who may be baptized on the next tour.

In Kuching, the capital of Sarawak, I met with eight young prospective members, and, even though none was baptized on this trip, we may have some members there by my next visit.

Of all those visited, only one was a girl. Two of the young men came in to the city from 17 miles away, and they had to get home before curfew and roadblock. There are still some areas that are not the safest for travel.

On the day I left Kuching the local newspaper had the following on the front page: "Operation Sri Aman — two more days to D-Day. Those who want to come out under Sri Aman terms, come out now! Give up the armed struggle to save your lives, the suffering and hardship of your relatives, and restore complete peace for the purpose of nation building." After the Feast I hope to make the

Two couples take an economy trip, 1,300-mile vacation via motorcycle

By Earl Smith

BIG SANDY — An unusual vacation trip which would strengthen family and friendship and involve meeting a lot of people, seeing a lot of natural beauty and generally having a good time — and, incidentally, costing only $160 a week — sounds like the product of wishful thinking.

But such a trip was recently taken by an employee of the Ambassador College campus here, along with his wife and another couple. Two motorcycles were used on the six-day, 1,300-mile journey through Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Arkansas.

"We had an excellent time — twice the fun we'd have had in a car," says Jim Rhome, 29, employee of the college's Transportation Department. "You see so much more on a bike. We went prepared and tried to make it an economy trip, and it was very enjoyable."

David Marsh, 23, and his wife of Longview, Tex., also made the trip.

The Rhomes and the Marshes had owned cycles "off and on" for about the past 10 years," says Mr. Rhome, and their wives were experienced passengers before this trip.

The four took a complete camping setup, which included a minimum of equipment: a small butane stove, air mattresses, sleeping bags, one small tent, folding chairs, an ice chest and a few cooking utensils. They intended to camp every night of the trip.

The two motorcycles carried this gear plus two riders without undue strain. Mr. Rhome drives a 450-cc Honda, Mr. Marsh a 650-cc Yamaha, both of which are equipped with luggage racks, buddy bars and crash bars. Both also have fairings to cut wind resistance.

First Leg

The four left Big Sandy Saturday night, July 27, headed for Eufaula, Okla., on the first leg of a trip which was to take them to the Lake of the Ozarks Feast site and Ozark National Forest in Missouri. Then they were to travel through Arkansas back to Big Sandy a week later.

After the 150-mile ride to Eufaula, they spent the night there with Mr. Marsh's uncle, then water-skied on Eufaula Reservoir most of Sunday. Then they drove to Springfield, Mo., that afternoon and spent Sunday night at a commercial campground.

"You really enjoy the traveling more on a motorcycle," Mr. Rhome says. "You are right there in the middle of the atmosphere. You see much more, feel the breeze and pick up the scents of nature."

The only mishap occurred Monday as they approached the Lake of the Ozarks.

Oily Road

"They had just oiled the road there," Mr. Marsh recalls. "They spray oil all over the road and just leave it there, and it was really slick."

Both bikes went down as they drove onto this surface at a speed of 20 miles an hour.

Damage was restricted to a broken turn signal on Mr. Rhome's bike, but the bikes, riders and camping gear were coated with oil.

"The crash bars saved us," says Mr. Rhome. "They kept us, the bikes and the baggage from major damage."

Crash bars are steel rods about three quarters of an inch in diameter bolted to both sides of the motorcycle frame in front of the rider's legs. If the cycle goes down, the bars keep it off the ground and prevent the rider's leg from being trapped between the cycle and the ground.

Because of the oily camping gear, the travelers decided to stay in a motel the next two nights, but they camped out the rest of the trip.

While in the Ozarks area for two days, they toured several caverns and saw sights associated with the Feast site and resort area there.

The return to Big Sandy was along what Mr. Rhome describes as "the scenic route," through Ozark National Forest.

Like a Snake

"It was a beautiful ride," he says. "The road is cut through the mountains like a snake, and the scenery is really magnificent."

The motorcyclists arrived back in Big Sandy Friday afternoon, Aug. 2, after two days of riding and a night of camping at Dardanelle Reservoir, Ark. Mr. Rhome says he's thinking about taking a similar trip next summer and feels this one was very successful.

EASY RIDERS — Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rhome of Big Sandy, Tex., took a 1,300-mile vacation on a motorcycle this summer. The entire trip cost only $160, part of which went for motel bills after an accident on a freshly oiled road which soiled their camping gear. (Photo by David McKee)

"You meet the nicest people on motorcycles," he says. "When we had the wreck it was another motorcyclist who stopped to help us. We saw many couples and groups, on up to eight or 10, traveling together on motorcycles, apparently on trips like we were. We never met any hippie types or punks either. Everyone was very helpful."

"Gas-station attendants were friendly and conversational, and so were store and motel owners. It was a good trip as far as meeting people goes."

How does Barbara Rhome feel about the trip?

"I was a bit apprehensive after the wreck, but overall it was very enjoyable," she says. "And I'm looking forward to the next one."

The cost of this unusual vacation was only $160 per couple for one week, a figure which would have been lower had the accident not forced them to spend time in a motel.

Fair booklet-display booths bring literature to public

By John Cafourek

BISMARCK, N.D. — "The Worldwide Church of God Presents Garner Ted Armstrong."

Emblazoned in red and black on a yellow background, this heading accentuates the 1974 booth display being shown at more than 70 fairs throughout the United States. These fairs range in attendance from 50,000 for a small county fair to more than three million for the State Fair of Texas.

The attractive, interest-catching booth, designed by Dan Ricker of Pasadena, media coordinator for the Work, is made of a relatively inexpensive foam-core material. Thirteen booklets and the Plain Truth magazine are displayed and offered on a literature-request card.

"There could be as many as 30,000 responses in just this year alone," Mr. Ricker predicted.

Responses for fairs already held have ranged from 100 to 800.

Member involvement is a vital aspect of each fair display. Members of the Worldwide Church of God not only provide volunteer manpower to staff the booth but also donate time to money-raising projects in the local area. These funds are then used to offset many of the expenses involved, such as rental of booth space.

The idea of representing the Garner Ted Armstrong program with an information booth at fairs was piloted in 1973 at South Dakota and Iowa fairs. The results included eight visit requests and an approximate 30-cent cost per response.

This year's program has mushroomed to more than 70 fairs across the nation.

Parisian, blinded in World War II, achieves success in art of poetry

By Bob Scott

PARIS, France — What makes the Paris Worldwide Church of God unique?

One thing is the fact that among its 250 members is a distinguished, silver-haired poet, Henri Guichard, who has been blind since 1944.

Anyone visiting the Paris church will notice the meticulously dressed monsieur with his eternal bow tie crisply knotted and centered, his white hair neatly cropped over his shining forehead — shining because of the grafts used to reshape a face marred horribly by war. The smile that separates his scarred, twisted lips will make you feel right at home, even if you don't speak his language.

Mr. Guichard was born in 1903 in a small village of the Burgundy region of western France. When World War II interrupted his restaurant business at the age of 38, he rushed to the war front, where he served as a mail carrier before an enemy bullet wounded his left eye.

Returning for convalescence to his home, the wounded restaurateur pursued his profession for most of the remainder of the war — until a late summer day in 1944.

Last Image

It was Sept. 8, 1944, in the town of Autun, France. He looked out after a cannon blast.

As he reached the window his eyes registered their last image: German gunfire. At that instant bullets ripped apart his face.

Ten long years of facial surgery followed, during which Mr. Guichard underwent 75 operations, many of them quite painful, to help repair his war-battered face.

It was during those years that Mr. Guichard brought to life in his hospital room a latent talent that has since become his trademark: poetry. Three books of poems and one record have emerged over the years from his prolific pen. The third book, which has just been published, is entitled Is There Still an Art of Living?

Le poete aveugle (the blind poet), as he is known in poetry circles, lost the help of his wife when she died in 1961. At that time a Red Cross nurse from Paris volunteered her services. She has been the poet's loyal helper ever since.

In 1966 Mr. Guichard and his helper heard for the first time the voice of Dibar Apartian, speaker on the French World Tomorrow broadcast. They became members of the Worldwide Church of God in July, 1967, and have attended church services every week since that time.

Mr. Guichard's attendance record was the same for the 89 Spokesman Club sessions he attended. In addition to his speeches, the poet had the opportunity at each meeting to give a short lesson on the intricacies of French syntax.

Prisoners of the Shadow

In one of his presentations, Mr. Guichard gave some guidelines on how to deal with "the prisoners of the shadow," his poetic appellation for the blind.

First of all, he says, you must realize that the blind person is just that — a person, a human being with feelings, hopes and dreams.

Treat him as you would any other fellow human being, all the while showing consideration for his special needs. While touching his hand, tell him your name and he will quickly begin to recognize you. If it falls your lot to guide him, realize you must pay attention for two people instead of one.

Don't worry about using expressions referring to sight in relation to the blind person. He talks often of having "seen" something when he means, of course, that he has seen it mentally by touching or hearing it.

Keeping Busy

Mr. Guichard keeps busy in his home on the outskirts of Paris, whether typing letters, composing poetry or prose or performing household tasks. He uses quite frequently the invention of a fellow Frenchman who was also blind, Louis Braille.

He hasn't lost his touch for French cuisine. Rating high among his culinary accomplishments are French fruit tarts.

Among his panoply of poems, two lines, which he himself chose to conclude a speech about his life, best summarize the existence of Paris' blind poet. Though the rhyme is lost in the translation, the thought is expressed by the following lines:

"If He Himself closed one day the door of the Ark/ Will He not guide the blind when he walks?"

Policeman enters wrong apartment, critically wounds Church member

By Dave Molnar

CHICAGO, Ill. — "It was like waking up into a nightmare," said Mrs. Janet M. Dzing, 38, a member of the Worldwide Church of God at Hinsdale, Ill.

Mrs. Dzing was shot and critically wounded by an off-duty policeman who broke into her apartment at 1:45 a.m. April 19, mistaking it for his own.

Mrs. Dzing has been a member of the Church for about three years and has been separated from her husband for that length of time because of a divorce-and-remarriage situation.

It was reported in the Chicago Daily News that patrolman Michael O'Brien of the Chicago police department apparently thought Mrs.

Dzing was a burglar when he entered her third-floor apartment.

The Daily News said patrolman O'Brien was apparently intoxicated at the time and thought he was actually in his own, second-floor apartment, directly below Mrs. Dzing's.

An assistant deputy police superintendent said the shooting took place about 1:45 a.m. after Mr. O'Brien returned to the apartment building, where he had lived for nearly a month.

The superintendent said Mr. O'Brien climbed the stairs to the third floor and went to the door corresponding to his own apartment on the floor below. After trying unsuccessfully to open the door with his key, the patrolman began pounding on it with his fists and then resorted to kicking it.

She said she got out of bed when she first heard a noise at the door.

"It was about 1:30 in the morning and I was in bed when I was awakened by the sound of a key going into ing to get into her apartment.

"You're Dead"

Mrs. Dzing said she went back to her bedroom to put a robe on when she heard someone kick the door open.

"I slammed the bedroom door and screamed," she said. "The next thing I heard was, 'You behind the door. If you don't move, you're dead.'"

Mrs. Dzing said that before she could think what to do, he fired a shot through the door. The bullet hit her in the back, shattering her liver, and came out the other side of her body.

Police officials, according to the Daily News, stated that patrolman O'Brien fired with an automatic pistol which he carries while off duty.

As Mrs. Dzing slumped across the bed, the patrolman entered the room. According to Mrs. Dzing:

"He said, 'What's your name?' and I told him. And he asked my name again and I told him. Then he finally said, 'If you don't tell me your name, I'll shoot you again, and I'll also shoot your dog.'"

Mrs. Dzing said that the patrolman then left the room, looked around the apartment and then phoned the police. The police arrived immediately, however, responding to her earlier call. According to police officials, Mr. O'Brien later failed a breath-analyzer test for intoxication.

Mrs. Dzing was taken to a hospital, where she was put into the intensive-care ward following two hours of surgery to repair damage to her liver and halt internal bleeding.

According to the Daily News, Mr. O'Brien was immediately suspended from the police force and charged with aggravated battery, reckless conduct and criminal damage to property.

Mrs. Dzing said that the charge of aggravated battery against the patrolman has been dropped and that state attorneys are still trying to bring lesser charges before the grand jury.

Mrs. Dzing's husband, Paul Dzing, feels that his wife's recovery is nothing short of miraculous.

"You Can't Sew Jell-O"

"She was given 48 hours to make it and she did by God's intervention," Mr. Dzing said. "The doctors said that the liver was shattered and that you can't sew Jell-O together."

Mrs. Dzing reported that she was in the hospital a little over two months and that her recovery is proceeding well, even though she is not yet back to work.

There is a happy ending to all of this. Mrs. Dzing and her husband, who have been separated for nearly three years since coming into the Church, are now able to reunite.

It was while she was in the hospital that Mrs. Dzing heard the news about the new understanding on divorce and remarriage. Her husband brought the tape by Herbert W. Armstrong to the hospital so she could hear it. She was so excited by the news that she sat up the entire two hours listening to it.

Previously, she had been sitting up for only 20 minutes at a time.

The renewing of vows will take place Sept. 8.

Members' footwork insures 'Plain Truth's' deliverance

By John A. Halford

SYDNEY, Australia — The Apostle Paul said, "How beautiful are the feet of those who spread the Gospel." The Worldwide Church of God at Sydney had an opportunity recently to find out just how beautiful.

Due to a prolonged mail strike, the post office was unable to handle most of the 14,500 Plain Truth magazines that are mailed to this city each month. Thousands were left at the Ambascos Press (the name for Ambassador College's printing facilities here) wrapped, sorted and bagged, but with nowhere to go.

Rising mail costs in Australia have caused some wide-circulation magazines to look for an alternate means of delivery. Postage on each Plain Truth is about 16 cents (U.S.), so the office here has experimented with couriers and private-delivery companies. And some Church members had asked if they might help.

The post office's temporary inability to handle the backlog gave volunteers the opportunity. The brethren were asked to deliver the Plain Truth to certain suburbs. There was an immediate and enthusiastic response from the brethren.

Wilfred Higgins, the press employee who had had the idea originally, sorted the magazines into easily manageable lots. It was felt that each family could comfortably deliver about 50 magazines without undue time and expense. Some, in the lower-density suburbs, were given less, while a few guinea pigs (including the ministry) were given 100 plus, to see if that was too many. A questionnaire was filled out by each participant so that the scheme could be evaluated.

Various methods of delivery were used. Some walked, others rode bicycles. But most used their cars. It was found that the best method was to have two in the car — one driving and the other navigating and delivering. Most families finished their round in two to three hours, after an hour of preliminary sorting at home.

All were reminded of the Work's policy of no follow-up. The magazine was simply to be deposited in the mailbox of each subscriber.

Nevertheless, this personalized delivery service produced a few incidents. Typical was the experience of a member who, having delivered the magazine, was called back by a woman subscriber.

"Are you one of them?" the woman asked. "Do you have a church as well as a magazine?"

After answering a few questions, the member gave the woman the local minister's phone number.

Whether the scheme is worthwhile has yet to be decided by the local Mailing Department. But almost everybody who participated said he would be willing to do it again.

Fifty copies proved to be a fair number for each person to deliver. Most brethren felt that they could do the job in half the time now that they know the route.

MRS. JANET DZING

the door," Mrs. Dzing said.

Her miniature schnauzer began barking immediately.

Mrs. Dzing said she got up to go to the door and asked several times who was at the door but got no response. She then phoned the police, telling them to hurry, that someone was try-

Malaysian Feast site moves to beach resort

By Guy Ames

SINGAPORE — For the past three years the Feast of Tabernacles has been held in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in the Federal Hotel. But this year the Feast site will be at Penang, a small island in the Straits of Malacca.

A new resort hotel with beautiful convention facilities opened late last year and is looking forward to playing host to the Worldwide Church of God for the Feast this year. Penang is called the sister city of Adelaide, Australia, another new Feast site this year. Col. William Light founded the city of Adelaide in 1836, exactly 50 years after his father, Capt. Francis Light of the East India Co., took possession of Penang in 1786.

The 256-room Rasa Sayang ("Feeling of Love") beach resort was planned by a firm of Hawaiian developers and officially opened by the prime minister of Malaysia, Tun Haji Abdul Razak bin Hussein, on Nov. 9, 1973.

In addition to the miles of white sandy beaches, the recreational facilities include boating, fishing, golf, tennis, badminton, volleyball, cycling and bullock-cart rides. Most visitors will probably want to take a drive or boat ride around the island, which is about 15 miles long and nine miles wide.

No visit to Penang would be complete without a ride up the 2,300-foot Penang Hill aboard the funicular railway with a drop in temperature to a cool 65 degrees.

About 20 visitors from Australia and one from Canada this year are expected for the Feast.

German S.E.P. completed; youths enjoy outdoor events

By Gary Hopkins

ALT AUSSEE, Austria — Two weeks of sunny 80-degree weather beside an alpine lake in the Salzkammergut, a lake and mountain area, faced 22 youths between the ages of 11 and 16 as the German Summer Educational Program (S.E.P.) got under way this year.

From July 28 to Aug. 9 young people from three countries conquered a 6,000-foot mountain, icy lake waters, a four-mile cross-country run and the cha-cha.

These experiences were planned and directed by Helmut Levsen of the Duesseldorf-office staff, who heads the German S.E.P. Mr. Levsen wanted to provide opportunities that youngsters "don't usually have as well as giving them a sense of accomplishment."

Unlike last year's fledgling S.E.P. in Germany, only youngsters 11 years old and up participated.

Professional Sailor

In addition to volleyball, softball (uncommon to Europe), archery and riflery — all taught by those from the Duesseldorf office who were assisting Mr. Levsen — sailing joined the list of activities. An Austrian Church member, Erich Hojnik, a professional sailing instructor, gave lessons in sailing.

The campers ascended 6,000-foot Mt. Loser under an intense sun Aug. 1. But on the summit they found enough snow for a snowball fight. Then several tackled the waters of a mountain lake still partly covered with ice and snow.

The alpine panorama atop Mt. Loser included other peaks and its massive glacier.

The teens learned dances this year, including the waltz, the cha-cha and a modified samba.

Cross-Country Run

A sports day began with another highlight of this year's camp: a six-kilometer (3.7-mile) cross-country run around Lake Alt Aussee at 6 in the morning. Trophies went to boys and girls who finished first.

Archery, riflery and team-sport winners were also presented with awards.

Other S.E.P. features included a tape and slide show on drugs; a girls' meeting on hostess etiquette; Kegel, or European bowling; and a first-aid lecture.

A night hike combined a sing-along, camp-fire-roasted hot dogs and a boat ride under a full moon.

Making stone figures and making pressed-flower pictures were two of the arts and crafts taught at camp.

Fossils were discovered in the abundant limestone deposits of Mt. Loser. Everyone found a few souvenirs.

The campers also visited a salt mine (Salzkammergut means salt-chamber land).

Water activities and mountain climb highlight Scottish Highlands S.E.P.

By Bruce Dean

BRICKET WOOD, England — Situated in one of the most beautiful areas of the Scottish Highlands, alongside Loch Lomond and surrounded by rugged hills leading up to Ben Lomond, the Summer Educational Program (S.E.P.) in the United Kingdom played host to 200 campers from all over Britain and parts of Europe and as far away as Australia and the United States July 21 to Aug. 11.

The camp is built on fields which are used for grazing sheep and growing crops most of the year. S.E.P.'s setup crew transformed these fields into a camp for more than 250 people. Plumbing was installed for showers and toilets; a kitchen complex was built; and tents for each "unit" of campers and a huge marquee for the dining hall were set up.

This year many new activities were added.

Water activities were participated in on Loch Lomond. A speedboat was added to give the waterskiing program three boats this year.

Each unit of campers sailed for a full day, with seven sailboats in the fleet as well as a motor launch, from which instruction was given. Loch Lomond experiences sudden changes in weather, so campers gained experience in sailing in sometimes gale-force winds and choppy waters.

Added to the camp this year was scuba diving. Campers were trained in basics of skin diving and then progressed to scuba diving, where they were exposed to another dimension of the loch.

The opportunity to ride horses was also expanded this year, with 16 horses available. The senior horse trail went high into the mountains and across Scottish glens, through five-foot-high bracken and over marshy land.

The highlight of the camp for the senior boys was a mountain trip. Under the guidance of Will McLaughlin and Alan Roochove (who both went on to tackle the Swiss-Italian Matterhorn, one of the toughest climbs in Europe), the boys for two days climbed mountains in the Glencoe region. The first day included a long trek over the peaks of Bidean Nam Bfan and ridge walks with breathtaking views.

The second day they climbed the north face of the Bultive Etive More. This mountain is 3,400 feet high, and much of the climb was up sheer rock faces with only a safety rope to protect the climbers in case of a slip. The scene below was incredible, especially as air-force jets screamed beneath the climbers as they clutched tightly to ledges.

Other activities included riflery, trampolining, canoeing, archery, football, wood carving, leather work and fly tying. And the evenings were complete with sing-alongs and band concerts presented by the camp staff.

Open forums were held in which campers were able to ask camp director Paul Suckling questions they had about the Church.

Population

dutifully airing them will lead national governments to take constructive action to face up to and solve the series of issues which concern all nations today.

Four Approaches

The difficulty is that nations do not even agree on the basic problem of populations and poverty. One speaker, a former minister of health and family planning for India, speaking here outlined the four basic approaches he said are taken by different nations.

The first school of thought holds that the problem is not one of numbers but of development. Once a poor economy is developed, the population numbers will take care of themselves.

The second says the problem is simply a question of underproduction and bad distribution. This school believes that the total production of food, for instance, can be trebled once modern science is harnessed to agriculture. With abundance on hand, a system of proper distribution can solve the problem of hunger.

The third school believes that it is all a product of a particular economic and social order, namely capitalism. Once capitalism is replaced by some type of socialism, everything will be solved.

The fourth school holds that technology is the only answer. Not only present technology, but the "limitless technology" of the future, would make the sky the limit, allowing the earth to support more than double its present population in the next quarter century alone.

Sharp Differences

With the nations of the world divided among such divergent opinions (and the differences are sharp, as brought out by delegates from several African nations), solutions by a body of general consent, such as the U.N., are not possible.

An August, 1974, publication called Development Forum, distributed by the U.S. Center for Economic and Social Information, sums up the world's present situation:

"A hundred years ago, a technological mistake or misdirection could not spell disaster for whole regions of the world, but today's nuclear and genetic engineering can. While world population has roughly tripled in this century, our pattern of development has closed many former options to us.

"From now on, all countries are going to have to pick their way economically, socially, technologically and indeed humanly, between, on the one hand, environmental destruction and increased risk and, on the other, depression, unemployment, political breakdown and either declared or undeclared resource wars . . .

"The chances are strong . . . that technological 'somethings' will continue to turn up, but they will be 'somethings' which will benefit only a small part of the world's population. And their side effects (like those of the fast-breeder nuclear reactor) may be so devastating that they totally overshadow prospective benefits."

GELA, Italy (UPI) — Fistfights broke out inside a church June 18 when two couples tried to beat each other to the altar in an effort to get married first.

Through an oversight, two weddings had been scheduled at the same time. First the couples argued, and then scuffles ensued when neither would yield.

Police finally arrived and calmed the fray.

Speech Department chairman named for Pasadena campus

By Les Stocker

PASADENA — As this school year began, Dr. Emil Pfister, 61, assumed chairmanship of the Speech Department at the Ambassador campus here. He comes to Ambassador after 29 years' experience at Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant, Mich.

At Central Michigan he maintained a full professorship and for 10 years chaired the speech department, with some 39 faculty members.

With his many years of experience, Dr. Pfister has brought some exacting goals to the department.

"I feel that we have a tremendous responsibility here," he said. "We have to teach people better expression of what's on their minds and hearts. This is a real challenge if you realize how much miscommunication is in this world.

Not Just Public Speaking

"We feel that if we teach people to communicate and to say how they feel, it will strengthen marriages. Good marriages depend on it. Relations between parents and children depend on communications. We are not just teaching public speaking; we feel that listening is equally important as speaking — intellectual listening. Interpersonal communication may be more important to a person than public speaking."

Many of Dr. Pfister's students over the years have become famous in the forums of public speaking. He said he was pleasantly surprised when he arrived in Southern California to hear the voice of a former student on radio. It was the voice of Dick Enberg, announcer for the Los Angeles Rams and the Los Angeles Angels.

Dr. Pfister not only taught Mr. Enberg but arranged for his first public-speaking job.

Among Dr. Pfister's former students are U.S. Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Michigan state legislator John Engler and dozens of people prominent in business, politics and the professions.

Insight From Travel

Travels in North and South America, Europe, Asia and Africa have also played an important role in Dr. Pfister's background. He has found that attending Rotary Club in foreign countries gives an insight that regular tourists don't receive. He has been a Rotarian for 30 years. He holds a classification called "senior active" and has served as a president and district governor in the club.

Dr. Pfister's interests have not been limited to professorship. He is a certified professional parliamentarian. This avocation specializes in consultation in parliamentary procedures used by state, regional, national and international organizations.

Dr. Pfister's wife Frances holds a master's degree and has served as librarian at Northwoods Institute in Midland, Mich. They have four children, all married.

Dr. Pfister jokingly said, "Both sons are college professors. That's the only thing wrong. Otherwise, they are both successes."

One teaches at the University of Oregon and the other at Harvard University's medical school. The Pfisters have eight grandchildren.

Tour opens doors for Work

Gotoh," he said.

"They said that they will make a report firsthand to Prime Minister Tanaka, who will personally extend his gratitude to Mr. Armstrong when he arrives [in Japan].

"They said their trip was exceptionally rewarding and successful for them, and they mentioned that as politicians it is important for them to meet the people and to establish rapport, not only in their own constituencies at home but also abroad, so that they can really understand more fully firsthand what the problems are in other countries and how Japan may be able to relate to them and that they could establish such a rapport with other people only by going to them.

"Mr. Armstrong expressed his heartfelt gratitude for being able to help the Japanese, who now constitute 10 of his Japanese sons [as Mr. Armstrong refers to them] and that he fully realizes how much help they have been and will be to him."

Mr. Rader continued: "Everywhere we went we were treated as a part of the delegation. Everything was expedited for us. They handled all of our customs and immigration problems . . . It was all quite official.

"It could not have been done in any other manner. In other words, if there had been no aircraft available, we would probably have needed six weeks to do what we did in two weeks. And even then it might have been difficult to accomplish as much in a limited period of time.

"Just as the Japanese opened up Egypt and other areas of the Arab world [to the Work of God] last January, they have now helped us immeasurably in Latin America and South America, so the benefits are truly reciprocal."

The leader of the delegation was Bunsei Sato, a Diet member and former vice minister of transportation of Japan, Mr. Rader added.

Mr. Sato, who was one of the foreign dignitaries who attended the opening of the Ambassador Auditorium here in April, has visited Ambassador College campuses here and at Big Sandy, Tex., and the recently closed campus at Bricklet Wood, England.

The present tour began Aug. 11, when Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Rader met the Diet members in Hawaii.

From there, the first stop on the tour was Mexico City.

The entourage then went to Guatemala and Panama City. The next stops were in Quito, Ecuador; Lima, Peru; and Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and Brasilia, Brazil.

President of Brazil

In Rio de Janeiro the Japanese were received by some 400 people at a gathering in their honor, Mr. Rader said. In the capital, Brasilia, they were received by the president and high-ranking members of the ministries of the government.

They then went to Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, and from there to Washington.

In Washington the Japanese delegation met Under Secretary of State Richard S. Ingersoll (second in line in the State Department to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger), a former ambassador to Japan.

They then traveled to Pasadena, and most of the Japanese congressmen were to leave immediately for Japan, Mr. Rader said.

One member had lunch with Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Gotoh and Mr. Rader Wednesday, Aug. 28. Another was to arrive the following Sunday to tour the campus here.

Mr. Armstrong faces an extremely busy schedule in the months ahead. He is to be in Japan for the Sept. 7 Bible study; he is scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Tanaka; he will probably be received by Prince Mikasa, brother of the emperor.

During Mr. Armstrong's meeting with President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt in late July, Mr. Armstrong had successfully conveyed a request from the prince to Mr. Sadat expressing the prince's desire to visit Egypt in the near future.

Mr. Armstrong plans to be in Israel for a testimonial dinner in his honor on either Sept. 14 or Nov. 15.

Some of the Japanese Diet members may go to Israel with Mr. Armstrong and then to Egypt.

After the trip to Israel, Mr. Armstrong plans to go to Europe, then return to the United States in time for the Feast of Tabernacles, Mr. Rader said.

concerning European defense, according to some reliable press sources. The move could lead to a renewed cooperation with other European nations in defense matters, a major change in the long-standing French policy of independence in foreign affairs.

A combination of economic uncertainties and a new president determined to alter the Gaullist position have led to a crash course in defense options for the new leader.

This highlights the growing worldwide trend of economic pressures leading to what previously were unacceptable political proposals — in this case an all-European nuclear force. Henry Sturcke.

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — Australia is today facing the same difficult and intractable problem that confronts most modern nations: inflation.

Although Australia's inflation rate is not as high as Japan's, Britain's or Italy's, the current 15 percent spiral is serious enough to cause considerable disruption to the nation's economy.

And the projections that it could go as high as 20 percent by early next year, rising to possibly 30 percent or higher by 1976, have done little to bolster the nation's sagging morale.

Meanwhile, Australians were given a sobering warning by a leading academician in this country. R.I. Downing, economics professor at Melbourne University and chairman of the Australian Broadcasting Commission, said:

"Unless income restraints and social reforms can be achieved, I believe we face the possibility of economic collapse and the destruction of our form of democracy."

It remains to be seen whether the government and the people will together achieve the significant turnaround in inflation that the present crisis demands, or whether Professor Downing's words will perhaps prove to be prophetic. Don Abraham and Dennis Luker.

with another nightmare that simply will not go away: crime in U.S. cities.

Statistics pouring into the Federal Bureau of Investigation from police departments throughout the country suggest that the war on crime — described by the Justice Department as "the most massive and sustained attack on crime in the history of the nation" — has been a failure.

FBI statistics show that the crime rate, which increased an average of nine percent a year from 1960 to 1970, showed a slight decline in 1972 for the first time in 17 years but was clearly on the rise again by the middle of 1973.

In the last three months of last year, the increase was 16 percent. In the first three months of this year, it was 15 percent. Dexter Faulkner.

WASHINGTON — One set of statistics indicates that the United States may be running out of families almost as fast as it is running out of natural resources.

U.S. Census Bureau statistics show that the number of single-parent families has risen by 31.4 percent since 1965, about triple the growth of two-parent families.

A recent study found nearly 12.6 million Americans living alone, and the number is expected to climb to 16 million by 1980.

The 1960s were a period of rapid social change. Unusually large numbers of young people left their parents' homes to attend college, to serve in the armed forces or simply to establish their own households.

Minority groups organized for the purpose of helping their people gain a more abundant living.

The hippie movement, communes and women's liberation challenged attitudes toward marriage and the family.

These changes and the tensions they created were occurring during the same years that the largest number of young people in American history were coming of age to settle down to family life. By their very numbers, these young adults, with their new life-styles and new values for a meaningful life, have had a profound effect on the American family.

The trend is for more and more young and old to delay marriage. Dexter Faulkner.

dangerous job in the world emotionally. Young [police] men become cynical and prone toward suicide, alcoholism and divorce."

Wyatt Earp

The movie he showed was an excerpt from Police Story. Entitled The Wyatt Earp Syndrome, the film depicts the affliction to duty and authority which young officers face. The film showed such an officer becoming authoritarian and miserably to live with. The officer's zeal for duty makes him suspicious of everyone. Fortunately, most policemen get over this syndrome, Mr. Wambaugh said. The movie has emotional impact and is being viewed by police departments all over the nation as a training film.

During a question-and-answer period Mr. Wambaugh said that in his years of experience he has noticed many people running loose in society who "crave an institution" — in this case a penal institution.

The craving develops after they get into prison, where they can abandon all responsibilities of the modern, adult world. No bills to pay, no job to compete for, no family to support. In short, no worries. He termed it a return to a "pseudoinfancy with regards to responsibility."

Unfortunately, the devices to get into an institution by this type of person are thrust upon society as a whole.

Celebrity Series

Mr. Wambaugh's visit to Ambassador was the initial program of the college's new celebrity series. This series presents a different celebrity on the campus every other Thursday evening. Season tickets are being sold to students, members of the faculty and anyone else wishing to hear the guest speakers.

Already scheduled to appear are U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers; Olympian Cathy Ribgy and husband Tommy Mason, who is a professional football player and sports announcer; screen star Eddie Albert; Winston Churchill III; and others.

In lieu of buying season tickets, those interested may pay a $2 charge at each lecture.

The same night Clint Zimmerman, minister from Pasadena, spoke to an average of 133 nonmembers each night in London, Ont., Canada.

On July 12 and 13 Mr. Hunting spoke to an average of 488 nonmembers each night in Toledo, Ohio.

Mr. McMichael spoke to an average of 238 nonmembers each night on Aug. 2 and 3 in Rochester, N.Y.

In San Jose, Calif., on Aug. 23 and 24, Mr. McMichael spoke to 760 the first night and 1,096 the second.

Dean Wilson, head of the Canadian Work, spoke at a campaign in Victoria, B.C., Aug. 24 and 25. Attendance the first night was 450 and 300 the second night.

Bahamas Barbecue

NASSAU, Bahamas — Ninety-one persons who attend the church here turned out en masse for a barbecue cookout and sing-along July 31.

The get-together was organized to coincide with a visit from the director of the Caribbean Work, Clarence Bass, and his wife.

The men were to do all of the work, and the women, for a change, to take it easy.

The cookout was held at the school where the church meets for Sabbath services. The group had finished eating when rain began to fall, so everybody retreated to a nearby building for the sing-along. F.S. Pritchard.

Toothpicks for a Year

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — The farm of Phil Hartwick, member of the church here who lives in Norland, Ont., was the site of a Peterborough-church camp-out Aug. 4 and 5. A few people from Toronto (Ont.) East and West also were present.

Despite cloud cover and a little rain Sunday morning, about 75 people made camp.

Sunday afternoon several dozen people played volleyball, and in the late afternoon everyone went to a nearby public beach.

After supper Leni Van de Polder of Toronto West and Hans De Koning of Peterborough captured first prize in a log-sawing contest: a year's supply of toothpicks.

Following this contest Robert Elliott, local elder here, led a sing-along of Irish and American folk songs accompanied by the guitars of Dave Walker and Mr. Van de Polder.

A nature movie for children and a marshmallow roast were simultaneously attended on the other side of the Hartwick house.

Early Monday morning eight anglers left the main body of campers to trek two miles to a remote lake to take in some fishing. The eight — Gary Epps, Mel Clark, Arlen Leckie and ministerial trainee Don Smith of Peterborough and Don Kerr, Jim Reid, Jarmo Koskinen and Herbert Storck of Toronto East returned about 1 p.m. with 13 smallmouth bass.

After a supper of chicken and fish, the campers headed for home. Herbert Storck.

Change of Pace

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Seventy-six teenagers from the church here took part recently in a four-day camp-out of the Milwaukee Youth Group.

They participated in baseball, football, volleyball, swimming, canoeing and fishing.

This year's camp-out featured a change of pace midway through the outing. The group held a dress-up dinner dance that included a musical show put on by The Today, a group organized just for the occasion.

Athletic competition was keen and trophies were awarded to occupants of winning tents.

Cookouts, water fights and fire-side sing-alongs put the finishing touches on the camp-out. David Kröll.

Strategic Corner

NAPA, Calif. — William Stough, a deacon from the Fairfield, Calif., church, ran into a problem while arranging for the location of the official Worldwide Church of God booth at the Napa County Fair Aug. 1 to 4.

"They wanted to put us outside with some religious freaks," said Mr. Stough. "I told them that we had to be in the main building because we had information and service of real importance to the people of Napa and their guests at this fair."

The management and directors of the fair finally relented and placed the booth in a strategic corner location.

As a result of the booth at the Napa fair, more than 80 nonmembers took literature-request cards.

Three couples were interested enough to be invited to regular Bible study. S.J. McKee.

Hasty Retreat

NEWARK, N.J. — Rough and rocky was the trail picked by the Newark teens for a hike up a mountain to Terrace Pond, near Butler, N.J., Aug. 4.

Many attempted to swim across the pond, but two people tired before they reached their goal and had to be rescued by a rubber raft.

The teens beat a hasty retreat down the mountain as thunder rumbled in the distance. They outran the storm most of the way down, but as they reached their cars, they were caught in a downpour. Kris Hendrick.

Final Meeting

BELLAIRE, Mich. — Shanty Creek Lodge is a luxurious ski lodge in the Great Lake State of Michigan. It was in this rustic setting, on a hill-top under a hardwood forest overlooking four sparkling freshwater lakes, that members and guests of the Gaylord and Midland, Mich., Spokesman clubs met the evening of June 15 for their final meeting of the season.

Several couples with June wedding anniversaries were serenaded during the meal by a South American solo guitarist.

Al Skinkle, Gaylord-club president, presented the only graduate from either club this year, Dick Johnson of Midland, with a temporary certificate of graduation; the authentic one had not yet arrived from Pasadena. Leth Cunningham.

Fashions on Parade

SYDNEY, Australia — Thirty ladies from the Sydney church got together for afternoon tea and a fashion parade Sunday, July 7, at a member's home.

The fashion parade displayed some of the latest styles and creations by Australian fashion designers. The fashions were supplied by a boutique (Kaya's of Cammaray) which is owned by two of the women in the Sydney church.

The fashions were modeled by three from the Sydney North church: Mrs. Ted Francis, Mrs. Darryl Tanner and Mrs. Colin Stanford. The clothes included casuals by Sportcraft and evening wear by Hilton, as well as many daytime outfits.

Coffee, tea, biscuits and cakes were served after the parade. Charlotte Whitting.

Booths Boost "PT"

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Because of scant television and radio coverage in the Rochester, Minn., and Waterloo, Iowa, church area, passing out free subscriptions to the Plain Truth at fairs has begun here.

Fair booths were provided by headquarters. They consist of 10-foot-by-10-foot backdrops with a large picture of Gamer Ted Armstrong and large cardboard pictures of Plain Truth covers.

A show is provided of slides depicting war, famine and the Millennium.

The booths are staffed with local-church people.

To date, fairs have been worked in La Crosse, Wis., with 850 free subscriptions given away; Rochester, with 1,100 subscriptions; and Albert Lea, Minn., with 550.

"There are a lot more people who either know about the colleges. Mr. Ted Armstrong or the Plain Truth than any of us realized," said Lloyd Nelson, Rochester member. Cindy Callahan.

Inner-Tubing Down the River

ROSEBURG, Ore. — A picnic for the outlying-Bible-study area here was held July 28. Softball, volleyball and card games were played, and other activities included swimming and inner-tubing on a nearby river.

The festivities provided an opportunity to meet new minister Dave Albert of the Eugene, Ore., area. He was accompanied by Jim Servidio, ministerial trainee. Dianne Skorseth.

Floating Plastic

ICHETUCKNEE SPRINGS, Fla. — Members and families of the Jacksonville and Gainesville, Fla., churches gathered here Sunday, July 28, for a farewell outing for Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wooldridge.

Mr. Wooldridge, a local elder, is being transferred to Buffalo, N.Y., having served here for two years.

A "float-down" began at 10 a.m. at the head of the Ichetucknee as some braved the chilling 72-degree, crystal-clear water on a potpourri of floats (one was made from empty plastic milk bottles) and inner tubes. Others chose to swim down the winding 3½-mile-long springs.

Following the float-down and eating, minister O.K. Batte gathered everyone around for the presentation of a going-away gift to Mr. and Mrs. Wooldridge, a stainless-steel flatware set. Jack Jackson.

Cooperative Thundershowers

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — The weather report predicted cloudy skies and showers and thundershowers for Sunday, Aug. 11.

But the members of the Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids, Mich., churches say it turned out to be a fine day for their second and final combined picnic for this summer.

The day's activities included softball, volleyball, football, a two-mile cross-country race and swimming.

A light rain fell briefly during the lunch break, but it went unnoticed by most as they comfortably settled under a park pavilion, eating, talking and playing cards.

The sun broke through the clouds in the afternoon. It wasn't until after the picnic that thundershowers began to fall. Ken Williams.

Sabbath in the Pines

PHOENIX, Ariz. — "The most enjoyable event I have ever attended," was typical of the many comments made by the brethren here at the wrap-up of the annual July 4 (See WRAP-UP, page 13) camp-out of the Phoenix churches. This time the churches had services too, on member H.J. Hausmann's ranch northwest of Flagstaff, Ariz.

Even though it's about 140 miles to the ranch from "The Valley of the Sun," Sabbath services boasted more than 310 people in attendance, including a few from Pasadena.

Other events filled the calendar from Thursday to Sunday. These included volleyball games between the Phoenix A.M. and P.M. churches, softball, Ping-Pong, hikes up nearby peaks and sing-alongs in the evenings. Bill Morgan.

30 Hours' Credit

ELLSINORE, Mo. — Nancy Wagner, recent graduate of Ellsinore High School here and valedictorian of her class, is attending Ambassador College at Pasadena, Calif.

Her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Wagner, are members of the Worldwide Church of God at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Early last spring Nancy took the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) test. The CLEP test is offered by the College Entrance Examination Board of Princeton, N.J., which also offers the Scholastic Aptitude Test (S.A.T.).

The board's 1,600 members consist of schools, colleges and educational associations which have a policy of awarding credit for acceptable scores on tests administered by the CLEP.

As a result of this test, Nancy received 30 semester hours of college credit and has registered as a sophomore at Ambassador. Keith Wagner.

60 People

SUNBURY, Pa. — More than 60 people took part in an outing of the Harrisburg-Lancaster, Pa., church July 21 on the Susquehanna River.

They enjoyed hamburgers (cooked by Mrs. Joel Duttera), horseshoes, boating and skiing. Clayton Hoke Jr.

Active Summer

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. — The teenagers of Michigan City have had an active summer, beginning with a box lunch and cakewalk at a church picnic in June at Tippecanoe State Park.

Then, on July 15, the teens met at the home of Jo Ann Affeldt and went to Chicago, Ill., to watch the White Sox conquer the Tigers.

On July 28 they sponsored a successful car wash. After a long day in the hot sun washing cars, they had a cookout at the Affeldts' and then went to a beach.

Aug. 10 they attended the LaPorte County Fair. Jo Ann Affeldt.

Canoeing Competition

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Who would expect to find three-month-old toddlers braving the waters of a Canadian canoe trip?

No one misses the action in the church here, not even babies and senior citizens.

Eel's Creek, in the beautiful Kawartha Lakes region of Ontario, served as the site of a short Sunday canoe trip and picnic for 51 men, women and children of the new Peterborough church.

Activities on July 28 commenced with a three-mile hike up Eel's Creek, terminating at High Falls for a picnic lunch.

Afternoon activities were swimming, fishing, kayaking, blueberry picking and canoe racing. A one-man canoe race was won by Gary Epps, and a two-man race was taken by Arlon Spencer and Bob Evans.

Following the canoeing competition, the band of outdoor enthusiasts packed up and paddled down the creek to tackle the rapids downstream.

A local elder here, Robert Elliott, said:

"You couldn't have picked a better place for a canoe trip and picnic. It was really tremendous." Don Smith.

Canadian Cruise

WINNIPEG, Man. — One hundred seventy members of the church here enjoyed a social evening June 22 on board the Paddlewheel Princess, a paddle-wheel boat, on the Red River.

Glen V. White, superintendent of Canada's Central District, was here for the occasion.

Light snacks, including hamburgers, french fries and chicken, were served by the kitchen staff.

Recorded music provided entertainment, and prizes were awarded for game dances. Ken Fedirchuk.

Live Volcano

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The cafetorium of the Cathedral Oaks School in nearby Goleta, Calif., was transformed Sunday, Aug. 4, into a bit of Hawaii by the brethren of the Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo churches. The occasion was what is fast becoming an annual affair here: a church social with a theme.

Festivities got under way in the hall at 4 p.m. amid posters of islands, fishnets, surfboards, Japanese lanterns and a grass hut. Background music was played by Bob Bosch. The decoration crew was directed by Ken Schwab.

For an hour young and old tried their skill at games.

Then dinner was served on the lawn. The menu included sweet-and-sour turkey, sweet-and-sour meatballs, fruits wrapped in turkey slices and heated on the barbecue pit, beans amandine, cinnamon apple rice, skewered fruits and punch or coffee. Food preparation was directed by Bill Masterson.

About 250 persons were served before the entertainment got under way at 7:15 p.m.

In a stage setting replete with a native hut and a live volcano, which spewed smoke at intervals, an hour's entertainment was provided by members of both churches.

Since pastor Al Kersha was to be transferred to Raleigh, N.C., in just a few weeks, this Polynesian social was also a farewell party for him and his family. He was presented with a scroll with the names of all those present, a pair of crystal candlesticks and a gift certificate to a local department store. Thomas Faunce.

DETROIT, Mich. — The Detroit West and East churches held a costume party Sunday, July 28.

Three prizes were awarded to the three couples whose costumes were judged best.

Three local-church bands performed. G. Wyscaver.

Ministerial Move

IPSWICH, England — Ted Gould, pastor of the church here, has left this area to serve as personnel director at Ambassador College, Pasadena.

He left his home in Bricklet Wood for the United States with his wife and family Tuesday, July 30.

Mr. Gould had served the Ipswich church for more than three years. Eileen Newberry.

Six Flags Over Texas

LONGVIEW, Tex. — After a candy sale and car wash, a group of Longview teens took a trip to Six Flags Over Texas, an amusement park in Arlington, Tex., 150 miles west of here. Eight Lufkin, Tex., teens joined the group.

A bus left with the teens early Sunday morning, July 21, in order to reach Six Flags when the gates opened at 10 a.m.

After eight hours of rides and shows, everyone climbed back onto the bus for the ride back home.

From their moneymaking efforts, the Longview teens also held a dance at a local YMCA with young people from nearby Big Sandy as their guests. Carol Klotz.

Gold Coast Picnic

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — The Gold Coast (Australian headquarters) church was host to the Brisbane and Toowoomba churches at a picnic Sunday, June 30. Members began arriving around 10 a.m. at the Tallebudgera National Fitness Camp for what was to be a time of fellowship, sporting activities, shoptalk and soaking up the sun.

Members were able to participate in a variety of sports — soccer, tennis, volleyball, swimming, table tennis and basketball. For the children some trampolines were a great attraction.

In a soccer match, the Gold Coast team narrowly defeated the Brisbane side.

The highlight of the day was a Gold Coast-vs.-Brisbane basketball match.

Both teams scored frequently, each basket bringing cheers from the member spectators. Despite valiant efforts by the Gold Coast team, the Brisbane team, led by minister Mark Cardona, took the lead early and finally beat the home team by 10 points. Reg. Wright.

Basketball on Wheels

TULSA, Okla. — July 10 at Tulsa's Maxwell Recreation Center the church here got its second chance against one of the hottest basketball teams on wheels. The Hot Wheels are a group of paraplegics who have been playing basketball in wheelchairs for about a year.

The Hot Wheels defeated the church team the first time they played, earlier this year, but the second game almost proved to be a different story. The church team (also on wheels for the game) tried to turn the tables, losing by only two points. The final score was Hot Wheels 32, Tulsa church 30.

High scorer for the Tulsa-church team was Les Stewart with 10 points. Doug Erickson and Dan Gates each scored six points. High scorer for the Hot Wheels was Tim Neighbors, with 16 points. Sheila Talley.

Bring Your Own

GALION, Ohio — About 100 members of the Columbus, Akron and Findlay, Ohio, churches met for a combined picnic Aug. 18 at Amans Reservoir near here.

The day's activities began at 10 a.m. with fellowship, volleyball and greetings all around, followed by a bring-your-own-lunch picnic.

After lunch were games — a 50-yard dash, a three-legged race, balloon toss, a tug-of-war and something called peanut pickup.

The picnic ended with watermelon and a ball game. Lonnie Moreland.

Members, deeply involved in hobby, dive to collect marine specimens

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Though grandparents three times over in their mid-40s, neither Jimmie nor Joan (pronounced Joanne) Coleman has settled comfortably into the rocking chair of early retirement. Members since 1968 of the Worldwide Church of God here, Jimmie and Joan have a renewed zest for life many of us might take a lesson from. If you visit their home and walk through their front door, you immediately see the fruits of their very active hobby: scuba diving.

There as you walk into the hallway are three sparkling saltwater aquariums displaying a variety of colorful marine life. Further inquiry reveals that the aquariums are stocked with specimens they collected mostly themselves.

How can this be, you wonder, since their home is in the middle of a hot, dry, semidesert, 500 miles as the crow flies from the nearest ocean and a lot further than that by car and trailer packed with scuba gear?

Their unusual hobby of scuba diving and marine collecting began a little over a year ago when Jimmie heard that a master diver was offering a course at Kirtland Air Force Base, where Jimmie works as a civilian foreman in electrical maintenance.

Divers' Places

Both he and Joan took the six-week course, which really took them through the ropes.

Out of this was formed the Albuquerque Desert Divers, a club which periodically travels to such places as the Gulf of California, off the western coast of Mexico.

The sparsely vegetated chocolate-brown hills there belie the color and variety of marine animals and plants growing along the lava reefs under the blue-green gulf waters. There the Colemans have come up with dozens of colorful marine specimens which they display for visitors in their living-room aquariums.

Orange starfish, blue damselfish, multicolored nudibranches, tube worms, anemones and pencil-long pipefish flitter and crawl before your eyes.

You learn that it's the male pipefish that carries the eggs and hatches them, as do male sea horses, rather than the female. At least a hundred new pipefish, like half-inch-long threads, exploded forth into one tank while I watched.

Joan serves a glass of "sunshine tea" (it's not bitter like the other kind, she says) and Jimmie tells about a dive in the Sea of Cortez (part of the Gulf of California).

"When you get down on the bottom you can really see that God has quite a sense of humor," Jimmie comments. "God's creation is there. And the only guy that's seen it is [Jacques] Cousteau, and he's an atheist. I don't care about what he has to say. I believe God put it there for us to see."

He brings out a couple of wet suits used for extended dives and cold water. (Even under the blistering desert sun, water offshore gets into the chilly 60s.) Jimmie explains that Joan made the suits. Since a good wet suit may cost over $100, and then it may not fit right, Joan phoned a wet-suit company and inquired about making her own.

They laughed. She said that if she could get the quarter-inch-thick heavy foam rubber she could try. She has now made 15 suits for family and friends at a cost about equal to factory-made suits, but hers are custom fitted.

John Birch

If their hobbies are unusual, so is another aspect of their lives. Jim was a chapter leader and later a section leader in the John Birch Society during the mid-'60s.

"We were going to save the whole world. . . It's terrible, things are rotten," he recalls, thinking back. "A guy came along with None Dare Call It Treason."

"Finally," he continues, "I saw I'd sat here like a big lib all my life. I had liberal ideas. Now it all seemed to fit together."

"I think it was God's way of telling us there's a world out there and it's in bad shape and we better get off our fannies.

"I was about to go bananas because there's no answer, absolutely none. There's nothin'."

"So a doctor friend, a bone specialist in the Society here, thought that he'd better get me out of here or put me in a mental institution. He offered to take me to Dallas and we went. We moved in with his mother, a hard-shell Baptist.

"So I'm upstairs, laying under the air conditioner, resting. And she had this funny magazine laying there, the Plain Truth, and one of these booklets, The Book of Revelation Revealed at Last. Now, I had been going to the Presbyterian Church."

Something to Hand Out

"I read that booklet and the Plain Truth. Now, in the Birch Society, if you wanted something to hand out, you'd buy a hundred copies and hand them out to all your friends. So we wrote to Pasadena and said, hey, send me 50."

Buffalo Philharmonic to play at Niagara Falls Feast site

By Dave Fishburn
NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. — Those who will be attending the Feast of Tabernacles here will have a chance to hear the Buffalo (N.Y.) Philharmonic Orchestra in concert Thursday, Oct. 3, at 8 p.m.

The concert will be advertised in the Niagara Falls area, and, since this is the first time the Buffalo Philharmonic will have played in the new Niagara Falls International Convention Center here, many people from the area may attend.

Those attending the Feast may reserve their tickets by mail. Tickets cost $4, $3 and $2. All seats are reserved.

Leslie Reid of Pasadena, a 1967 graduate of the Ambassador College there, will play a piano concerto with the orchestra. Mrs. Reid has played at the Mount Pocono, Pa., Feast site and at several personal-appearance campaigns.

In May she performed with the Pasadena Symphony Orchestra at the Ambassador Auditorium (The Worldwide News, June 10).

While classical numbers will be featured in the first half, the second half of the concert will be devoted to popular music.

To reserve tickets, send your name, address, city and zip code to TICKETS, P.O. Box 1084, Falls Street Station, Niagara Falls, N.Y., 14303. Be sure to tell how many tickets you want and whether you want $4, $3 or $2 seats. Enclose a check or money order, payable to the Niagara Falls International Convention Center, for the full amount. Include a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

BRICKET WOOD, England — Following a successful two-night Plain Truth-lecture series in Birmingham, England, the British campaign team moved north of the border to Scotland's major cities: Edinburgh, the historic capital, and Glasgow, the major population center.

Edinburgh's two-night campaign of Aug. 10 and 11 was attended by 340 and 375 each night, respectively. Three hundred fifteen were completely new.

One hundred twenty-five of these new people attended on both nights to hear campaign coordinator Richard Plache speak.

Evangelist Charles F. Hunting of Bricket Wood, director of European and Middle Eastern affairs for the Work, took the Glasgow campaign one week later. Attendance there was 446 and 404. The lectures were attended by an average of 241 new people each night.

Following the Birmingham campaign, 125 people attended the first follow-up Bible lecture. After eight weeks of lectures which included subjects such as "Why Were You Born?" and "Which Day Is the Christian Sabbath?", 75 people were still attending.

A 26 percent response from the Edinburgh campaign led to 81 nonmembers attending the first follow-up Bible lecture. To confuse the statistics even more, 20 of these hadn't even attended the original campaign. These had been attracted by a letter sent to local Plain Truth readers following the campaign.

Figures for the Glasgow follow-up are not yet available.

PASADENA — The Portfolio is once again being produced on this campus. The college paper was canceled last year because of budgetary considerations. Paul Kroll has resumed the position of faculty adviser. This year's editor is sophomore Bob Nesler of Modesto, Calif.

BIG SANDY — Hackmore Superman 1012, mild-mannered bull at the AC Ranch at Ambassador College here, won first place in a livestock show Tuesday, Aug. 27, at a fair in Greenville, Tex.

Superman, who was born Jan. 15, 1972, weighs more than 1,600 pounds already, according to Dale Schurter, head of the ranch and director of agricultural research at Ambassador.

The AC bull won twice this year in competition against a bull that had previously beaten him at the Gilmer, Tex., fair. The bull which beat Superman took the championship at fairs at Tyler and Canton, Tex., two events the AC Ranch did not participate in because of the Sabbath.

Other showings planned for Superman are at Gilmer in October and at a Houston, Tex., fair next spring, Mr. Schurter said.

BIG SANDY — Gary Prather, choral director at Ambassador College, Pasadena; Bronson James, soloist with the personal-appearance campaigns; and Louis Winant, manager for the campaigns, were here Aug. 25 and 26 to interview students who wanted to try out for the campaign chorale and ensemble which perform for the personal appearances.

About 18 from both campuses will

GARY PRATHER be chosen to be in the chorale, Mr. Prather said. They will be accompanied by a small ensemble.

PASADENA — Statistics on some of the summer campaigns show many nonmembers attending the personal appearances.

In Montreal, Que., Canada, an average of 550 nonmembers each night heard Leslie L. McCullough, director of the International Division, deliver a two-night campaign on June 15 and 16.

An average of 795 nonmembers each night attended in Cleveland, Ohio, on June 28 and 29 as Sherwin McMichael, director of personal appearances, delivered a campaign.

The same weekend an average of 356 nonmembers each night attended (See GRAPEVINE, page 9)
